POWER COMPANY MAY RENEW BID

U. S. Influence Is Dominant At Peace Meeting

Joseph Crew, American Delegate Succeeds in Carrying Policy—Disputed Issues of Turkish Treaty Agreed on.

(By The Associated Press)

LAUSANNE, July 17—The Turkish peace treaty will be signed July 24th or 25th, according to present expectations. The Allied and Turkish delegates now here will be the signatories of the main treaty and the other documents to be signed, including the agreement for control of the Turkish straits. The Russian Soviet government has been invited to take part in the signing of the Straits convention.

The agreement reached last night on the disputed questions of concessions and the evacuation of Turkish soil by foreign troops will be adopted at a plenary session of the conference this afternoon, it was expected.

The accord represents a victory for the United States whose representative, Joseph C. Grew, minister to Switzerland, was successful in his insistence that the policy of the open door and equal opportunity in the Near East be adopted.

Had it not been for his tenacity the tentative agreement made last week, unfavorable to United States' interest, would have been included in the treaty. Through numerous conferences with Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, who appeared utterly fatigued from the constant pressure from both sides when the final sessions began, Mr. Grew won him over against the pleas of the British and French plenipotentiaries. And having won their struggle to eliminate from the peace treaty all future preferential concession rites for foreign companies and official confirmation of existing concessions, the American representatives now will devote themselves to completion of the new Turkish-American treaty.

The inside story of the meeting yesterday when the peace made a week ago was "patched up," as one Allied delegate described it, is of a tense battle waged over the question of the oil fields of Mesoptamia which the British claim under the provisions of the concessions of the Turkish Petroleum Company. Though none of the American delegation was present it was apparent that American influence was dominant in the conference chamber and that the stringent application of Mr. Grew's resistance was strong enough to permit Ismet Pasha to hold until the finish.

Negro Preacher Is Arrested Here On Theft Charge

William Martin, colored, and said to be a minister, who was arrested here several days ago as a fugitive from justice from Washington, has been turned over to authorities from that city. Martin was sought on a larceny charge, resulting from complaint by a negress, who is said to have left here with Martin, the couple intending to marry. The minister is charged by the girl with stealing her clothing, but he explains this by stating that the girl disappeared, after placing her clothing in his trunk and since he did not know where she was, he could not return them. The Washington officers also hinted at a white slave charge against the Danville negro, but added the charge probably would not be substantiated.

Martin who has been preaching in this vicinity for some time declared that he and the girl made their plans to wed and both left for Washington putting their clothing in the same trunk. The negress, he said, disappeared one morning and he has not seen her since. Concluding that it was useless for him to remain in the capital, he returned to Danville bringing the clothes with. And thus it is that Martain has lost a prospective better half and also must answer for taking her clothing.

Move Schools At Ruffin To Make Room For New One

The task of moving the two wooden school buildings at Ruffin, N C, was started today, preparatory to erecting a modern two-story brick school house on the site. Contract for the new school has been let and it will cost between $65,000 and $75,000. It is proposed to convert the present school houses into dormitories as soon as the new school has been completed, but until that time they will be used for scholastic purposes.

J W Chandler of Ruffin, who was here today said that the new school house will be one of the finest rural schools in this section of the country that it will have fourteen class rooms and that the contract calls for completion within 120 days. Mr. Chandler said that the crops on his farms are in bad need of rain. Despite the fact that beneficial rains have fallen here during the past few days, Ruffin has not experienced rain in sufficient quantity to do any material good.

Another Side Of Heart Balm Suit

(By Chicago Tribune Service)

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Answering the recent $50 000 heart balm suit brought against her by Manuel Herrick, former congressman from Oklahoma, Miss Ethlyn Chrane admitted in the District of Columbia Supreme court yesterday that she did promise to marry Herrick but pleaded that she was justified in jilting him because his actions after their engagement became unendurable.

For instance she told the court, in June, 1922, Herrick proposed to turn their approaching marriage into a money making proposition. He outlined a scheme to keep their marriage secret until such time as he could extract money from the newspapers for giving them a "scoop" on the event. Herrick, she said, thought he could secure a large sum of money from some newspaper for an exclusive story of their wedding.

When she refused the secret marriage, the young woman stated, Herrick displayed toward her a violent temper the possession of which had been unknown to her. He swore at her, she averred, and threatened physical injury to certain of her relation unless she consented to the secret pact.

After she had promised to marry him, Miss Chrane said the character and characteristics of the plaintiff became known to her. His personality and habits became exceedingly distateful to her, and evenutlly so obnoxious as to render his persence unenurable she stated.

Officer Is Cleared of Shooting Charge

E. E. Setzer, Wounded by Policeman I. H. Harris, Confesses to Theft of Machine, Making Offense a Felony—Charges Dropped And Officer Reinstated.

E E Setzer's confession of stealing a Ford car from the street in High Point was the vital factor in the dismissal of a warrant against Police Officer Ira H Harris, charging him with an assault on Setzer, alleged car thief, by shooting him while trying to escape. The hearing of the case which came up in the police court this morning consumed less than three minutes. Setzer was the only witness to testify. After he had told briefly that he was arrested, made a bid for liberty and that he was shot the commonwealth asked him if he stole the machine from High Point. The boy's answer was "Yes I took the car, all right." This significant statement made the case a felony and resulted in the dismissal. Harris, who was suspended the day following the shooting was reinstated soon after his acquittal this morning.

The car larceny case against Setzer and Vester Coltrane was continued until tomorrow, owing to absence of witnesses from High Point.

The arrests and shooting occurred early last Monday morning. Sergeant H. T Haraway and Officers Harris and R. A. Adams had stopped the car which looked suspicious. This was on North Main street. A few questions and Sergeant Haraway remarked that they would have to put the boys under arrest, whereupon Setzer made a break for liberty down Moffett street. Sergeant Haraway and Harris gave pursuit. Harris leveled his revolver and fired several times, one of the shots striking Setzer in the right shoulder. He was not caught until several hours later. In the meantime Coltrane also showed resistance and Officer Adams is alleged to have used his club on the man's head.

The shooting is said to have caused some little excitement in the neighborhood. One of the bullets pierced the weather-boarding of the residence of J. P. Bennett on Moffett street. The ball also tore through a door and struck the ceiling in a living room and then fell to the floor. It was discovered the next morning by members of the family. No one was in the room at the time the bullet entered the house. It was said that Mr. Bennett stated at the time that he did not wish to make any complaint.

Roanoke Man Gets His Voters Early

BY GEORGE H. MANNING.
(Washington Correspondent of Danville Bee)

WASHINGTON, D C., July 17.—The principal aim of the politician is to capture the vote. Many start after the new voter as soon as he or she reaches the twenty-first year and believe they are rushing things.

But Representative Clifton A. Woodrum of Roanoke gets the furlined molasses jug for starting after the vote the moment the baby reaches the cradle.

If the strength of the infantile impression is as strong in later life as some authorities claim then all the men and women of the Sixth Virginia district will doubtless be voting for Judge Woodrum about 1944.

For in the coming generation every citizen of the district will have as one of the earliest impression the reception from the Congressman of two bound volumes on the care of infants published by the U S Labor Department and sent to his or her parents by Congressman Woodrum.

The Roanoke Congressman several months ago requested the State Bureau of Vital Statistics at Richmond to furnish him immediate reports on all births in Roanoke, Bedford, Floyd, Campbell and Montgomery counties. That official said he would comply with the request provided the lists were not used for advertising.

Now as soon as news is received of the birth of a baby in the Sixth district Judge Woodrum mails the parents two books entitled "The Care of Your Baby" and "Infant Care."

Accompanying the books goes a letter from the congressman to the parents of the child extending his congratulations.

It's a unique stunt.

Will Try Beauty Appeal In Trial

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

CHICAGO July 17—Taking a lesson from a large number of women who have been acquitted of murder in Chicago, noting that they were attractive and handsomely attired, Mrs Tillie Kliment, under sentence of life imprisonment for slaying one or more of her husbands by poison and awaiting trial on additional charges has suddenly changed from a greasy repulsive thing, to a creature marcelled, rouged and wearing a chic bonnet and fetching dress.

Mrs Kliment took note of the fact that Mrs Sabella Nitti-Crudelle like herself, appeared in court in slovenly attire unkempt hair, and Mrs Nitti-Crudelle was sentenced to hang. So being a woman of intelligence she resolved to make a different appeal to the jurors.

Despite the limited boudoir facilities of jail, she managed to achieve a marcel wave in her hair. When she appeared in court yesterday her face had been scrubbed industriously, rouged and powdered, a combination affected by the most successful vamps. She wore a new dress and a flowery summer hat.

The hearing was continued until the August term and teh trial of Mrs Nellie Koulik her cousin also charged with poisoning one or more of her husbands, was set over to the August term. It was intimated that the additional charge against Mrs Kliment will be dismissed, as it is felt another jury would not vote to hang her.

Meanwhile over in the county jail Mrs. Nitti-Crudelle, having recovered from her first violent outbreaks and attempts at suicide, when she believed she was to be hanged immediately, has set about scrubbing the floors cheerfully. Other prisoners have assured her she will never hang.

Appalachian Signs Up Martinsville and Turns Eye on City

Company Officials Have Full Data in Danville's Power Consumption and Have Promised to Make Concrete Proposition.

Announcement made this morning that the Appalachian Power Company had closed a contract with the town council of Martinsville covering a period of five years under which electrical energy would be supplied, was read with interest today by councilmen and city officials. In view of the recent visit to Danville of officials of the West Virginia concern, at which time the Danville field was thoroughly canvassed, speculation turned to whether the power concern would renew its efforts to come to Danville. On the occasion of the last visit of Appalachian Power Company officials they expressed an earnest desire to come to this city and it is known also that they were given the highest encouragement by E J. Saari who at that time was executive secretary of the Young Men's Business Club. Mr Saari conducted considerable correspondence with the concern and not long before leaving here said that an important announcement would be made shortly but since Mr. Saari's departure nothing further has been heard.

It may be said on the highest authority that the city would not resent the coming of the Appalachian Power Company to Danville and that if it were moved to strive to protect its monopoly in the electric power business it would be only in the interest of giving to Danville people electric power at the lowest possible cost. In other words if the Appalachian Power Company can offer the city power at a rate lower than the cost of manufacturing it in the city plant the city government would be frankly interested provided the contract did not contain objectionable clauses. The invasion of Danville by an out-of-town concern would almost certainly depend it is said, on the rate it would offer.

It is pointed out, however, that the cost of extending overland lines from Radford to Martinsville and Danville would be high and that this heavy investment would naturally have to be taken into consideration in computing the wholesale rate at which power would be delivered here. Negotiations which have so far taken place indicated clearly that the company would not be interested in retailing the electric energy. It would deliver it at the city plant and there it would be distributed by the city among the commercial and domestic users, payments for power being made to the city, who in turn, would settle with the Appalachian company.

This is not the first time the Appalachian Power Company has turned its eye to Danville. In past years there have been conferences but they have not resulted in any concrete offer being made and it is only recently, it is understood that the concern reached a position where it could undertake branching out on a large scale. The status of the negotiations at the present time is that the Power Company has all of the data it needs regarding Danville and its representatives left this city some weeks ago promising to come back and make a concrete proposition. With Martinsville definitely signed up it would not be surprising to hear from the West Virginia company before long.

Just what the attitude of the local textile corporation would be is not known. There is small doubt, however, that the power company would endeavor to make a contract with the concern because the annual amount of current used would be a source of big revenue to the power corporation. The Riverside and Dan River Mills are said to burn about ten times as much coal per day as the city burns in its municipal enterprise so that the City Sergeant P. H Boisseau is posting notices of the Democratic primary to be held in Danville on Tuesday, August 7th at which time Danville and Pittsylvania will jointly nominate three members of the General Assembly.

Lilian Wilson, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs Lee A Wilson Holbrook avenue, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday afternoon when the little child started across the street in the path of an automobile belonging to Mrs J I Kaufman, and driven by her chauffeur. The little girl decided to follow other children with whom she had been playing and left the curb. Seeing the car she became confused and turned back. The car struck her and knocked her down but the machine was moving so slowly that it was almost immediately stopped. It was the work of an instant to withdraw the child from between the two front wheels and she was carried home somewhat bruised and badly frightened. Her hurts were by no means serious and she is reported to have fully recovered. Eyewitnesses say that the slow speed of the car at the moment of the accident alone prevented a more serious outcome.

Oscar Hyler, assistant secretary of the Danville Young Men's Christian Association, left this morning for Blue Ridge, N C, where he will attend the Boys' Work Department of the Southern Y M C A summer school.

C. B. Loomis, international Y M C A. boys' work secretary for the south, is in charge of this department of the summer school and has associated with him some of the best known Y M C A boys' work secretaries of this country.

The two weeks' summer school course is an extensive one and is of a very practical nature. Mr Hyler plans to return to Danville immediately after the close of the school on August 1st.

The handsome invalid machine of F. W. Townes and Son, undertakers, was extensively damaged this morning while on the premises at Edmunds Hospital. The machine had been driven there for a patient and while it stood in the alleyway some one attempted to move it. The large door in the rear caught the wall and was torn loose together with other parts of the body at the rear. At the time it could not be established who had attempted to move the machine. Finally Sergeant J H Martin was called and after investigating learned that George Hairston, a colored employe of the hospital, had attempted to move the car so that he might get another vehicle by. No arrests was made, the negro stating his willingness to pay the damages.

Will Tunnel Through Continental Divide To Shorten Distance Across Nation

HIGH IN THE ROCKIES CUTTING THROUGH THE CONTINENTAL DIVIDE, A TUNNEL SOON WILL BE DRILLED IT WILL SHORTEN THE TRANSCONTINENTAL TRIP FROM NEW YORK TO THE WESTERN COAST BY 178 MILES. THIS BIT OF SUPER-ENGINEERING IS THE REALIZATION OF A DREAM OF THE LATE DAVID H MOFFAT, AND IT WILL BEAR HIS NAME THE ILLUSTRATION SHOWS CLEARLY THE PROBLEM BEFORE THE ENGINEERS THAT IT IS A GENUINE PROBLEM WILL BE REALIZED WHEN IT IS REMEMBERED THE TUNNEL WILL BE APPROXIMATELY 9100 FEET ABOVE SEA LEVEL.

(Special to The Bee)

DENVER, Colo., July 17—The United States Supreme Court has reduced the distance from New York to San Francisco by 178 miles.

In a decision upholding the legality of an act creating the Moffat Tunnel Commission of Colorado the Supreme Court also removed the last legal obstacle to the accomplishment of one of the world's greatest engineering feats

As a result, work will begin within sixty days on the Moffat Tunnel, a tube a little over six miles long through the heart of the Rockies

One of Longest.

It will bore directly through the Continental Divide from McCoy to Dotsero. Thus it will cut across the extreme northwestern part of Eagle county nearly in the center of the state

The distance between these two towns is less than 10 miles—as the crow flies. But as the railroad runs—it is closer to 185 miles 185 miles of tortuous track over and around mountains The tunnel will reduce from hours to minutes the time required between the two points

When completed the Moffet Tunnel will be the longest in the United States.

It will be one of the five longest transportation tunnels in the world. The Mont Cenis Tunnel, Modane, France, to Bardonecchia, Italy, is seven and ninety-eight hundredths miles in length The St Gotthard Tunnel is nine and three-tenths miles long The Alberg Tunnel is six and thirty-six hundredths miles long and the Simplon Tunnel is twelve and three-tenths miles long

In an engineering sense it is believed the Moffat Tunnel will rank even as of greater importance than other of the world's famous tunnels

Time Shortened.

Geological formations which will be penetrated, scientists believe would practically have been impossible to pierce a few years ago.

However, late mechanical devices have been invented which are expected to make possible the construction of the tube in less time than was required for the building of the other and longer tunnels

Transcontinental trains, engineers predict, will be running through the Moffat Tunnel within three years Ten years were required for the building of the Mt Cenis Tunnel The St. Gotthard took nine years, the Alberg was completed in something more than three years and the Simplon Tunnel was begun in 1898 and was finished in 1905

Summarized, other facts about the Moffat Tunnel are

Elevation of tunnel, eastern portal, 9190 feet, western portal, 9100 feet

Sixteen Feet Wide.

Construction of tunnel lowers railroad tracks vertical distance of 2406 feet.

Grades 0 3 on eastern end and 0 8 on western end

Size of tunnel 16 feet in width and 24 feet in height

Construction, main tunnel through a pioneer tunnel first to be driven. Pioneer tunnel 8x8 feet and center line 75 feet from main tunnel

Formation, probably of granite, gneiss and schist Similar to formation in Simplon Tunnel, with substitution of granite in Moffat Tunnel for misintegrated mica and schist rock in the Simplon.

The new tunnel will bear the name of the late David H. Moffat who built the railroad west from Denver to Steamboat Springs, which also bears his name

St Louis, Mo, July 16—The National Bank of Commerce's obligation to H Clay Pierce, New York Capitalist, as found by Special Master J W Jamieson in a report submitted to the District Court here last Friday will actually amount to $3-918 31, though Mr Pierce was given Judgment to the amount of $1,067,445 the Associated Press was informed today by officials of the Bank

According to the Special Master's report it was pointed out by the bank officials, the judgment was to be paid as follows

$750,000 in five per cent bonds of the now defunct Tennessee Railway Company and the rest in cash In view of the fact that the bonds today are very worthless, the bank officials say, and in view of $300,000 that had not been paid by Mr Pierce, the bank s indebtedness to Mr. Pierce actually amounted to $3,918 31

The litigation was the outcome of a loan of $700 000 made by the Bank on notes of the Tennessee construction company secured by $75,000 of Tennessee central railroad bonds and $250,000 of Nashville Terminal Association bonds. Mr. Pierce was one of the guarantors for the payment of the interest. The bank sued Mr. Pierce several years ago and obtained judgment for $700,000 of which Mr Pierce paid $400,000 the bank officials stated

(By The Associated Press)

BRISTOL Va-Tenn. July 16—Prince Mauarikan Denyi, of Lagos. West Africa, in address before an audience of several hundred persons tonight in the Lee Street Baptist church here, urged Southern negroes to turn a deaf ear to advice that would lead them to migrate to the North.

"The South is the best place in the world for the negro," he said. In the North the negro finds more of tribulation than of hospitality and favor. The Prince said that missionaries in his native country had made great steps in discouraging the natives from having more than one wife He said that his grandfather, a ruler for many years, always had at least twenty wives

POPE PLANNING TO LEAVE ROME

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK
(By Chicago Tribune Service)

LAUSANNE, July 16— Is the Pope planning to move from Rome, The Holy City, to Vienna?

Swiss papers, which keep their ears close to the ground, began today to give some credence to this rumor

"The Vatican undoubtedly is working to re-establish the Papal States," is the substance of their reasoning "The collapse of Germany is going to wreck the illogical structure the Versailles Treaty set up in Central Europe and the amidst this wreckage the Vatican will find an opportunity to create a group of Papal States around Vienna—notably Austria, Poland and Bavaria and possibly Czechoslovakia.

"In this bigger role the Pope will find Vienna a better headquarters. Besides he is kept too much a prisoner in Rome

'The college of cardinals, which is the senate of the Roman Catholic church sincerely believes that now that the powers have failed to restore order and peace, the Pope's last hope for the world is in this direction They believe the Pope can only make peace by establishing papal states in Central Europe to replace the present states

"Chancellor Mgr Seipel, of Austria already is clearing the ground for the new order of things"

Swiss opinion holds that the Pope would willingly abandon Rome and all its historic associations and church buildings for the privilege of again establishing some papal states

Besides the real freedom the Pope would have in Vienna would be of priceless benefit to the church.

'They were still in the clothes they wore as prisoners and all had full beards They had with them two of the bandits who had treated them kindly, and whom they were bringing down to adopt as servants"

Bride Coues 7 Other Girls at Art Center Into Romance

Married Life's Great, Each Happy Bride.

CHICAGO. — [Special.]—"Married life is great" pretty Mrs Fred L Miller employed in the business department of the Chicago Art Institute, kept telling other girl workers. And as she repeated the Coué-like matrimonial formula the dimpled bride of five years flashed her happy smile and pointed to Friend Husband

Emile Coue.

"Married life is great," he agreed.

It brought results Coue himself could have done no better, if as well.

First, Mrs. M. T. Osada, assistant cashier, who until her marriage was Miss Estelle Sabel, stepped forward and confessed she had been a bride since November. An hour later Lorene Woodward danced in to make a similar confession Then entered Miss Florence Lindberg.

"Married life is——" she began

"I know it," dimpled Mrs. Miller "What's his name?"

"Glenn Burgoyne," said the former Miss Lindberg

The confession bee was now in full swing. Miss Oro Sutherland admitted she had been Mrs J L Herman for some time. Miss Benita Harmon told of her marriage to John MacBeth Miss Dorothy Anderson announced the girls might as well address her hereafter as Mrs K [illegible] and Miss Myra Manly said she would prefer to be called Mrs. Conard [illegible]

"And we all owe it to you" chorused the seven smiling brides "Married life is great"

M. Coué could not be reached. It is known, however that he has refused to accept the watchword that Paris tried to foist upon him—"O be, I'm well" Possibly pretty Mrs Miller's slogan would meet with his acceptance as an addition to "Every day in every way, I'm getting better and better.

NEGRO'S FLIVVER CATCHES AFIRE

In days of yore when a mule was inclined to balk fire produced the desired action upon occasions when other persuasion proved futile—but this is the day of flivvers and opposites. Yesterday shortly after the city clock had boomed the hour of six, Joseph Ross, colored, started to wind up his flivver just below the intersection of Main and Union streets and the flivver was not inclined to move, but instead of being started by fire, it stopped by fire, for with about the third twist came a tongue of fire shooting out from under the hood. Some people get the thing started, cranking their flivver, some break their arms, but Joseph brought out what appeared to be every piece of fire-fighting apparatus in town. The first truck was all that was necessary, for a bucket of sand left the Ford ready to ramble again, being very little damaged from the flames that for a short period seemed to envelop the entire front end.

Trucks responding to the alarm made remarkable time. By the time a man had turned in the alarm at the Burton Hotel and got back to Virginia Hardware, where the car stood the fire truck from the Patton st. station had arrived at the scene. In thirty seconds the truck from the West End station had arrived

SURPRISE WAS SPRUNG IN CASE

LYNCHBURG, Va. July 16. — A surprise was sprung by the prosecution today in the trial in Federal Court of C. M. Campbell, charged with misappropiation of liquor and funds taken in raids made while he was a Federal prohibition agent, when the new witnesses were placed on the stand. These with, Sherman Hill, Ed. Jones and J. D. Smith, corraborated the testimony previously offered by government witnesses in regard to the "Rakes raid," near Roanoke.

These three men, who did not know that Campbell was on trial until they were searched out by the government and summoned to court, said they witnessed the raid and were positive that no liquor had been destroyed in this instance as was contended by the defense.

Arguments will probably begin in the case tomorrow afternoon with a possibility that the case will reach the jury Wednesday.

ACTION AGAINST BUSINESS MEN

(By The Associated Press)

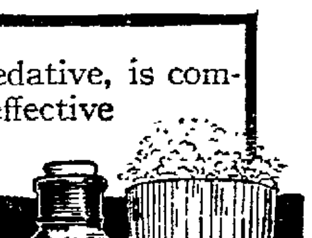

RICHMOND, Va, July 16—Judge David C Richardson has issued a call for a special grand jury to meet in Hustings court Friday to consider indictments against business and professional men who have failed to secure state licenses for the current fiscal year Commonwealth's attorney Dave E Satterfield, Jr., said today that several hundred indictments probably would be considered by the special jury because of the failure of the men involved to procure their licenses before July 1.

It was announced by court officials, however, that delinquent persons who secure licenses before the grand jury may do so and relieve themselves of possible means that might result from indictments

Eight-Hour Day Blessing Says Britain's 'Gary'

It Has Helped Both Employer and Employe—Few Would Revert to Old Barbarous 12-Hour Shift.

Sir Robert A. Hadfield, Great Britain's best known steel magnate, inaugurated the eight-hour day in his plants more than a quarter of a century ago.

His associates and competitors critici ed him freely. But gradually they followed his example. Now the eight-hour day is in force in all mills in the empire

And it is neither a theory nor a day dream, Sir Robert says.

Milton Bronner, European manager of NEA Service, has just interviewed Britain's "Gary". And in this article you read what Sir Robert told him.

By MILTON BRONNER

(Special to The Bee.)

LONDON, July 17.—"The eight-hour day in the steel industry of Great Britain is not a theory nor a day dream. It is a fact.

"It is not a failure. It is a success.

"It has helped the men. It has helped the employers.

"Few if any, of the employers would revert to the old barbarous 12-hour day. And certainly none of the men would. The eight-hour day has not injured the standing of the British steel industry in the world's industrial activities.

"It has helped it because of increased production, satisfied workmen and an absence of industrial disputes at a period in the world's history when in so many places employers and employes are at logger-heads."

The man who said this to me was no college professor elaborating a thesis he had worked out. Nor was he a lawyer employed by stockholders to preside over the fortunes of a steel plant. He was one of the outstanding figures in the great British steel industry—Sir Robert A. Hadfield.

He is head of the well-known firm of Hadfield's Limited. He is the inventor of manganese steel and low hysteresis steel, of nav alloys, steels and metallurgical imp ements. And he is interesting to Americans because he has an American wife.

He is the winner of various medals given by the Franklin Institute of America. Also the medal for high scientific achievements. By his practical knowledge of the steel business, by his vision and also by his humanitarian impulses, he has seen his company become one of the large concerns of Britain.

"More than a quarter of a century ago," said Sir Robert, "I put the eight-hour day into effect in our plants. It was voluntary on my part. It was the result of what I had seen and observed.

"I watched my men. It was saddening to me to think of them going home from work so tired they had neither the zest nor desire for any recreation.

"A worn-out man is an irritable man. The oxygen has been burned out of his system to such an extent that he has been poisoned by his labor for his daily bread.

"Now think what it means when such a man goes home to his wife, who herself has been taxed almost beyond endurance by the job of rearing a bunch of noisy children and of doing practically all the household chores herself. Is there any wonder that there are quarrels and domestic discontent and unhappiness?

"Bad work in factories often springs from domestic discontent. And domestic discontent is often a direct result of the utter fatigue of the bread-winner.

"The more I studied the subject, the more I became convinced that human labor is not a marketable commodity like a pound of tea or a half dozen eggs. The man working a lot of expensive machinery in a steel mill is not himself a machine.

"He is blood. The machine under strain wears out, but there is no pain. The man under strain also wears out, but there is pain and sorrow and suffering.

"That's why I introduced the eight-hour day in my plants. It was met with a storm of criticism. You know there are always employers who preach the old doctrine that the longer and harder you work your men, the more profits you take.

"But it really isn't so. Shorter hours have paid. Men who come back to their jobs refreshed, men who have had time to get acquainted with their families and have a little fun out of life, come back at high-water mark.

"And there is one other important thing in this matter of relations between employers and employed. There should be really, and not theoretically, an opportunity for the men to discuss their real or fancied grievances with the owners. Our men feel at full liberty to call upon us for round-table conferences. The result is, we have neither strikes nor stoppage of any kind.

"The men don't distrust or suspect us. We meet on an equal footing. We enjoy free speech—on both sides. We know what is in their minds and they know what is in ours.

"If they have a difficulty, we know it. They don't made 'demands' upon us and we don't make 'demands' upon them.

"They suggest. We suggest. And we talk over the suggestions in an amicable manner. They are not merely 'hands' to us and we are not mere 'bosses' to them.

"On both sides we realize we have a common interest in the promotion of the big business in which we are all engaged. And on both sides we do our best to make that business even bigger and better because both sides share in the happy results."

Felix McKinney Succumbs to Burns At Gen. Hospital

Felix McKinney, who yesterday was seriously burned when trapped by fire with two other roomers over the Main street store operated by A. Parroody, died shortly after midnight in the General Hospital. Mr. McKinney, who was 74 years of age, reacted unfavorably from the shock and throughout yesterday and afternoon he had been sinking. Mr. McKinney, who in running towards the staircase which was enveloped with flames when the roomers realized their plight, fell in the corridor overcome by the fumes. He was rescued by firemen who found that he had already been burned by the intense heat at the spot where he had fallen. Taken to the hospital it was found that his arms had been terribly burned, one of them almost to a crisp while all of his hair had been burned off and his neck and face and the upper portion of his body had been seared. Little hope was extended for his recovery the moment a survey had been made of his injury.

Mr. McKinney was well-known to the tobacco fraternity. After living in Rockingham county, near Ruffin, he came to Danville about fifty years ago, and for thirty years or more had been a leaf dealer. He formed a partnership with Thomas Morton, the firm being known as Morton & McKinney, and they dealt chiefly in wrappers which they shipped to Richmond. Later this partnership was dissolved and for the past several years he had been buying tobacco on his own account. His wife died several years ago, but he is survived by a daughter and son.

The body was prepared for burial this morning and it was taken to Woodleaf in North Carolina, where burial was expected to take place this evening. His brother, Boss McKinney, came to Danville from Rockingham county yesterday on hearing of the injury sustained by his brother and he accompanied the remains to their last resting place.

Almagro Stages a Gloved Battle

Danville has entered the fight game, but not on the Shelby, Montana scale. Last night in Almagro, Nathaniel Shelton, a 140-pound dusky, was returned winner over Herbert Carrington, 130-pound negro, in nine rounds with the gloves. After receiving the worst of the mauling for nine rounds and a black eye that today outshines his complexion "Highball Herbert" decided Lady Luck had forsaken him and dropped to his knees—a position where no doubt he can hit better with the ivories than with the gloves—while his opponent was heralded as victor. The deciding "lick" was neither "seven" or "eleven" but a deadly uppercut.

The Leeland bellman, Tex Rickard of Almagro, who promoted the affair, is of the opinion that in 'Naller Nat' Shelton he has one of the best chocolate-coated pieces of fighting machinery in the country, and is anxious to put him against any dusky nearby, who is aspiring to Harry Wills circles.

EASY TO DETECT FAKE MONEY SAYS SECRET SERVICE MAN

CAPTAIN THOMAS I. PORTER

CHICAGO, July 17.—Take a close look at the paper money in your roll.

Is there a suspicious thickness in the corners of the bill where the amount is printed?

Are the fine lines in the decorative scroll work blurred?

Does the bill seem a bit off color in its shading?

Yes? Well, it's probably counterfeit or raised, and you ought to blame yourself for taking it.

Captain Thomas I. Porter, in charge of the U. S. Secret Service here, who still is on the trail of the money makers in spite of his 77 years, will give you small consolation if you accept bad bills.

"Counterfeiters make their money to pass only once," he warns.

"They're satisfied as soon as the bill leaves their hands and they get value for it. So they don't have to make them either permanent or fit for the closest inspection. Their game, you know, is to pass their money in rush hours on outlying storekeepers."

Captain Porter doesn't give the counterfeiter credit for either technical skill or romance.

"He's a dub," the captain says. "He hasn't the nerve to go out in the open and rob. And anyone with the skill to operate a camera can make bogus bills.

"There's no reason for his existence, no type or psychology to him. Anyone who doesn't want to work, who feels the lure of easy money, is a potential counterfeiter. Most fake money is easy to detect, even by the inexpert. Be vigilant and you won't take it."

Then the veteran's mind lapsed back along the 38 years of his service.

"But it used to be that we ran across skilled workmen in the counterfeit game," he said. "They were harder to detect in the old days."

Captain Porter is on the job every day. That's the way he keeps young.

Minister Visits Booze Places To Get Goods on 'Em

Names Places He Says Sold Him Liquid Where He Went on Investigation.

BALTIMORE, July 17.—"Corrupt or honest, law enforcement agents have failed to make Baltimore dry." With this challenge, the Rev. Edward Taber, pastor of the Hampden Baptist church, Sunday night recited details of his personal investigation of illicit liquor traffic here, declaring that, in visit to about 10 places, he was refused intoxicants in only two establishments.

Speaking in his church at Roland avenue and Thirty-seventh street, the pastor gave addresses of five places in which he declared he bought liquids he called beer and whisky.

Asserting he had paid from 10 to 15 cents a glass for beer and from 25 to 50 cents a glass for whisky in his rounds, the pastor estimated the potency of the beer at 5 per cent alcoholic content and the whisky at 50 per cent.

Describing one of the places visited as a reproduction par excellence of pre-prohibition saloons, the speaker said:

"First, there was the well-known rail on which to rest the foot. The floor was covered with sawdust. Over in one corner lounged a crowd of men singing "Sweet Adeline" with much gusto. And I don't believe for one minute they 'got that way' from lemon sodas and sarparilla.

"One bartender advised me that I was perfectly safe in drinking his products. He is supplied by the most reliable bootlegger in town, he said. At another, when I hesitated after a sip of beer and asked if he had any whisky, he replied: 'I was just about to ask if yo uwouldn't like some good whisky.'"

The speaker said he made the study "to awaken the people to the fact that enforcement of prohibition laws is a joke and a travesty, and to emphasize that some prohibition agents should go to work or quit."

"And I am not preaching from hearsay," he declared. "I have evidence for all I say, although it is not the kind of evidence which would convict. I am not seeking to obtain the arrest of anyone and merely want to place the facts before the public. I shall co-operate with the United States District Attorney if he desires, but I am appealing only to public opinion.

"I offer no apology for drinking the stuff. I was not drunk. I was searching for facts, and anyone who sticks his head in the sand and refuses to see the facts is no better than an ostrich.

"They say I must have been accompanied by an old soak who knew the ropes. This I deny. The man who went with me to some of the places was a Christian gentleman. And they also say I must have been dressed like a bum to carry the thing so far.

"While admitting that I am no Beau Brummel or Rodolf Valentino, I can assure you I was dressed respectfully, better than on my wedding day."

At one place, which he did not single out, the pastor said he walked slowly away and as he did so, a policeman watched him and then went into the "saloon." Deciding to return and try to negotiate another sale, he said he was refused on the second trial.

"I shall not expose that policeman nor am I interested in seeing him lose his job," he declared. "I am confident, however, that he was protecting that place."

"I've received some anonymous letters this week since announcing my invitation. In some I was called a crook and a meddler. Others volunteered information that the police are corrupt. But I paid no attention to any of them. I have no respect for a man or woman who is afraid to sign a letter.

"Those who expect me to run 21 miles tonight after finishing this sermon, as I did in the Marathon from to ask if you wouldn't like some good taken. I hereby announce my residence and telephone number.

"I shall not preach on this subject again nor shall I make any further investigations," he said. "I am through with the whole thing. But I do make a plea for three things:

"A step by Mayor Jackson, together with the District Attorney and the Police Department,—toward better law enforcement.

"A public statement of policy from the Police Department as to the authority of the police in attacking this situation.

"Activity among taxpayers to insist upon strict enforcement of the prohibition law."

Hugh C. Marshal Dies At Stuart From His Hurts

News was received here this morning of the death at Stuart during the night of Hugh Chaplin Marshall, aged 26, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Stuart, who was injured Friday, a week ago when he plunged into shallow water in the mill pond at Stuart, thinking that it was deep. From the first his recovery had been doubted though specialists who had been called from Richmond and Roanoke had said that he might live for several years though he would be a helpless cripple. The funeral will be held at Stuart tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Marshall, who was married, went with a party of friends in the sultry heat of the day for a plunge in the pond. He apparently did not know that the water close to the running board built on the bank for bathers was deceptive and that though looking deep was really not more than two or three feet deep. He was preparing to dive when some of his friends saw what he was about to do and shouted to him but it was too late. Striking the sandy bottom, his backbone was broken just below the neck and he remained under the water for two minutes. Others realizing what had happened, quickly swam to him and brought him out unconscious. He later was revived, only to find that he had no use of his body from the shoulders down.

"Yes, We Have No"— (Guess the Rest) O. K. as to English

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., July 17.—Those who jibe at "Yes, we have no bananas" as improper English should hearken to Prof. Irving Fisher, professor of political science at Yale, who is a guest at a local sanitarium. He said today it is correct English upon a certain hypothesis.

Pressed for further enlightenment, he smiled and said:

"It is technically proper in answer to the question, 'Do you have no bananas?'"

Good Morning Judge!

Mrs. Mattie Lee was arraigned in the police court this morning at a private hearing on a charge of maintaining a disorderly and ill-governed house on Floyd street. After many witnesses, including several residents of the community had testified, the warrant was dismissed, but another was brought, charging the woman with being of bad fame and character. The court remarked that the warrant had not been properly filled out. No evidence for the defense was taken. Wienesses testified of the place as being a nuisance but could give no direct evidence of disorder. The bad fame and character warrant will be heard next Thursday.

Cora Gray, colored, drew a fine of $5 and costs for selling goods on Sunday.

A fine of $2.50 was imposed on T. G. Burgess for an alleged assault on Charlie Staples, colored. Burgess announced that he wanted to note an appeal and the fine was raised to $11. Staples stated that Burgess had assaulted him. Burgess testified that the negro came into his restaurant on an errand and when he asked him to remove his hat, he declined to do so, and became very impudent. He said the man continued his impertinence and that he struck him. The fine was then imposed.

The case of Henry Scott, charged with violating the Mapp act, was set for next Friday.

Cases against Phil and Maria Brown, colored, for operating a disorderly house, were continued until Thursday.

Will Smith, colored, is still being held for illegally using a pass on the Southern, pending further investigation of the case. The negro was fined the usual amount for being drunk. This charge led to the later complaint.

TYPHOID'S LOW DEATH RATE

NEW YORK, July 17.—Control of typhoid fever has made such progress that in 1922 the death rate for this disease was the lowest ever recorded, according to figures compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Based on statistics from one-seventh of the total population of the United States and Canada, the death rate in the year mentioned was 5.6 per 100,00 0of population. In 1911 the rate was 22. per8 100,000.

These figures are particularly cheering to the American Child Health Association, which is engaged in fighting typhoid as well as other diseases which affect children and mothers.

Newest apartments have ranges built into recesses, so that a curtain may be hung over the opening to conceal the stove.

Babson Says Industry Will Reach Amazing Proportions.

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., July 17.—Roger W. Babson was asked today regarding the commercial possibilities of the aircraft industry. Mr. Babson replied:

"According to all current statistical indications the aircraft industry may assume almost amazing proportions during the next twenty years or even in the next decade. Of course, the World War gave flying a great start, but unlike most other war-stimulated industries, the aircraft business has maintained considerable of its growth in the years since the war. This is a good sign. It means that fundamentally the industry is meeting a real need—which is for more rapid transportation.

"At the rate of growth that has been shown in the past ten years, there will be as many people in the aircraft factories twenty years from now as there are now employed in the automobile factories. It would not surprise me if more than one hundred thousand aircraft per year would be the production two decades from today. It is altogether possible for this industry to show just as spectacular growth as the automobile industry has shown.

"There are some serious obstacles to be overcome before it will do this, but there were nearly as many serious obstacles in the way of the automobile business when it was first started. The first need, of course, is Federal regulation of the air. There is now every indication that some Federal law will be passed at the next session of Congress, regulating air navigation and providing for inspection of ships and examination of pilots. There is need for well-marked airways for both day and night flying and regular landing fields at important cities along the route. Also, there must be aircraft terminals just as there are railroad terminals. Timidity on the part of the public will gradually be overcome as it is demonstrated more and more clearly that air navigation is comparatively safe. That public patronage is rapidly growing is shown by the statistics for 1920 and 1921, when 115,163 passengers and 122,512 passengers were carried in those respective years. When we consider that before the War hardly any one would step foot in an airplane, this growth of public confidence is remarkable.

"The dirigible is better adapted to long distance flights and the carrying of freight, whereas the airplane is speedier and better adapted to the shorter flight. The first development is tending toward regular commercial air-line companies, paralleling the railroad or the auto-bus carriers. Until further simplifications and improvements are made in the small individual airplane, the industry will continue to develop along these lines. However, the day is likely to come when regulations and inventions will make the individual airplane as desirable as the Ford automobile is now.

"The cost of commercial transportation by air in Europe is only eight cents a mile, but of course the airlines of Europe are heavily subsidized by the governments. It has, however, been estimated by authorities that private companies in Europe without national competition could operate profitably on the passenger rate of 15 cents a mile. This is certainly as cheap as any man can operate an automobile. The most in the United States is much higher because we are comparatively new at the game. However, the cost is coming down. In 1921, it was 55 cents a mile. In 1922 it was 42.8 cents a mile; by 1940, I believe, we will be able to travel as cheaply, and probably cheaper, by aircraft than we can by railroads or the automobile.

"A word in regard to investments in the industry is in order. While I believe that aircraft business is due for a great growth, on the other hand no one should plunge blindly in with his capital. Study the situation carefully. It is yet highly speculative. There is a great deal of experimenta, work to be done and there are many obstacles to overcome. The alert investor, however, will do well to keep tabs on this coming industry, so that when the time arrives he may really take advantage of the investment opportunities offered."

NEW YORK, July 17.—Prices were irregular at the opening of today's stock market with the majority moving lower, particularly the rail shares. In no instance was the change greater than half a point. Oil stocks were slightly improved.

High Lights Of Y. W. C. A. Conference Told By Danville Delegates

The conference at Blue Ridge for the Young Women's Christian Associations of the Southern region closed July 16th and the two delegates representing the local Association, Mrs O. P. Estes, recording secretary of the Board and Mrs Estelle J Hinchliffe General Secretary have returned to Danville.

Two hundred and fifty delegates gathered at Blue Ridge for this inspiring conference, number in this large group representatives from the Young Women's Christian Associations in Virginia West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Kentucky and Tennessee There were guests from Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana Board members, secretaries and young business women made up the conference group

The aim of the conference was the exploration and experience of the way of Jesus for one's own life and for the life of the world. The well thought out program provided group study and discussion council hours and platform addresses The conference speakers were President William J Hutchins, of Berea College, Berea, Kentucky, and Rev. Frank W Bible of the foreign missions conferences. Dr. Hutchins a successful speaker as well as a convincing writer, gave several lectures on Bible Study in Its Relationship to Life and the "Life of Master" and ... Dr Bible in his talks on international relationship was most interesting and out of a wide experience with the Far East peoples gave much that was both educating and illuminating to his interested audience. Dr Bible stresses the thought that all education should make for peace, deploring any tendency in educational systems to perpetuate animosities and to glorify war, such as might be found in texts of history and geography and military training in schools. This policy is being strongly endorsed by the World's Committee of the Y. W. C. A. and was greatly emphasized in five courses at the conference on "The Place of Women in the Life of Today"

Perhaps the dominant note of the entire conference was the fact that women are thinking for themselves today and that they are realizing they must share the responsibilities of shaping the policies in the great problems that are confronting us. A new departure of the conference was having the young business women meeting and studying with the older and better trained women. These young women showed much intelligence and interest in the discussion groups, having something to contribute of their thinking and reading.

The conference was not entirely given up to serious thought There were hikes, and very wonderful ones too in this hill-crowned out-of-doors spot Swimming and tennis appealed to many and long automobile trips were planned to Mt Mitchell and many other wonderful places in that glorious country of mountains. A fitting close to this stimulating conference was a pageant "The Golden Trail," written by a National Y. W. C. A secretary and was put on by the delegates at Blue Ridge. The pageant told the story of the place the Y W C A is filling in the lives of girls both in the near East and the Far East.

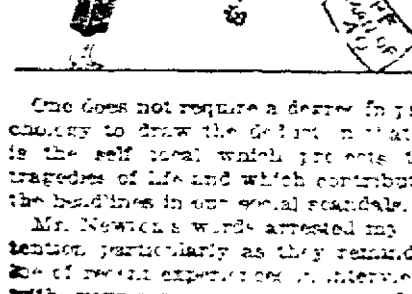

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED

Self Love Great Contributor of Grist to Divorce Mill, Miss Blake Warns Wives.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Trace any of our ills to its source, and its roots will be found in our worship of success, our cult of comfort, our quest of a 'good time,' our selfish love of the easy way, which turns out in the end to be a path of flame."

So says Joseph Fort Newton in a current publication, writing upon the problem of divorce and marriage.

One does not require a degree in psychology to draw the deduction that it is the self ideal which presents the tragedies of life and which contributes the headlines in our social scandals.

Mr. Newton's words arrested my attention, particularly as they reminded me of recent experiences in interviews with young women, some in their 'teens and some in their early twenties.

"I ... the older man, the successful business man, the man at 40 or over," I heard repeated, from the lips of young beautiful youth ... "selfish love of the easy way.

Hardly a day passes but another illustration is added to those already accumulated either in divorce statistics ... disclosures to prove that the easiest way is the hard way and a futile way of grasping at happiness

Perhaps the ... ... shop soulful drudgery, perhaps the ... simple headed girl for the ... the darling of some ... wife or husband stepping out for a "good time"—the dedication of self to an ideal, to service and to responsibility is the basic cause of the trouble by reason of its total absence

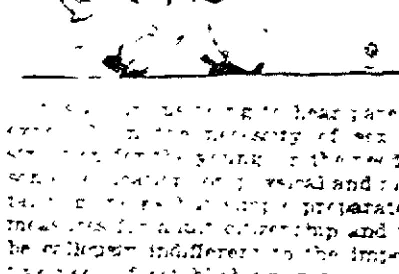

But how to meet life armed against the desire to pamper, coddle, and live for self?

There is but one armor to buckle on, and it is religion. The denomination matters not, so long as it fixes an ideal of the relative values of life and money, of service and liberty, of happiness and duty.

In this age, which some one has determined as the age of "the gadding mind and the grabbing hand" with its tendency to value everything by what it brings, with its appetite for dangerous adventure, its licenses and lightly viewed immoralities, marriage is not half so much in need of economic adjustment as religious.

But the principles of the golden rule cannot be administered by law nor are they likely to be adopted after maturity has been attained. If a child has been taught to know no other law than self ... since childhood, he or she cannot suddenly by the simple bond of matrimony be converted into the belief of duty to home, to children, to a marriage partner, and to state.

"When he or she is old enough to think of him or herself is time enough for religious instruction," I have heard parents say time and again

... to hear parents ... the necessity of sex instruction for the young ... of ... physical and mental ... preparatory measures for adult citizenship and yet be ... indifferent to the imperative ... of establishing in the young the moral force to support all other branches of instruction.

Old Fashioned Armlets Do Much for the Slender of Arm

by Mary Olonuer Hewell

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.] — Singularly simple season, this! Party floors full of one toned dresses—all white, all gray, all beige, for the most part. Takes a well developed personality to stand out from the crowd.

Little sister wants something that will make her do that. Youth must be served, the sooner the quicker. So let's give her the dress of yellow organdy with white lace we just saw in a 57th street window. This was trimmed with white daisies set on the skirt, each supporting loops of two tone ribbon, violet and blue, and there was a big chou at the left side of the waist, consisting of a fan of the lace, a cluster of the daisies, and little peepings of the violet and blue ribbon.

Note that the hem of the skirt is made of the lace, and that there are only two insets of lace, one at each side of the front of the skirt. The top of the frock is entirely unadorned, a way frocks have this year. The slight draping adapts itself well to girlhood, and the old fashioned little armlets do something for slender, not to say pipe stem, arms, as well as permit a showy if not dimpled effect in shoulders to justify itself.

A HEART EVEN IN A GREAT CITY

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

CHICAGO, July 17—Great cities have hearts despite the general belief that their inhabitants are too busy with their own affairs to heed the suffering of others. This was proven today in the affair of the injured baby pigeon and the soft hearted little stenographer.

A frail little pigeon, with a wing bruised, clung to a jutting ledge, waist high, in the heart of the city, with thousands of busy people hustling by. Came a care free, bobbed haired little stenographer, with just a scant minute to reach her desk in a big mercantile establishment. The wounded pigeon saw her and gave a despairing flutter

The little stenographer stopped and put up a protecting hand The bird recognized a friend and cuddled down into the hand, permitting itself to be drawn from the ledge. The crowd halted and watched the performance. Undoubtedly there was abond of understanding between the crippled bird and the girl.

Then a tall stranger pushed through the crowd, lifted his hat, showed the girl a badge and took charge of the bird. He was an agent of the Audubon Society.

"Mercy!" said the little stenog. as she darted for her office, "I'll get a bawling out for being late, but I could not leave that poor crippled baby pigeon to die."

The cities are no harder than the hearts of their inhabitants.

MORNING COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 17—Liverpool is slightly lower this morning. Our market shows the pressure of more than the usual number of conflicting factors Yesterday it was European news that depressed prices. Election of Johnson will not be received with enthusiasm for radicalism in politics is looming up as a possibility disturbing the coming year.

THE EMPTY CUP.

No rousing cheers and plaudits loud
Shall spur me on from spot to spot;
No gallery shall do me proud
By hanging on my every shot;
Concerning me no scribes shall rave
Of stymies lept or backspins spun;
But, even so, I'll never have
To pose beside a cup I won.

Mid luminaries of the links
I'll dazzle not, a shooting star;
I'll wabble on, a golfing jinx,
Bereft of bogey and of par;
A trailer I, bedecked in crepe,
Forever destined to be skun;
But, just the samey, I'll escape
From posing by a cup I won.

I've done some silly things in my
Perambulations here and there,
But kept them from the public eye
And dodged the limelight's mocking glare;
And though I'll always be a rube
I'll ne'er be forced to brave the sun
And advertise that I'm a boob
By posing with a cup I won.

MORNING STOCK LETTER.

Thomson & McKinnon

NEW YORK, July 17.—Your papers this morning tell you that our agricultural section continue to follow false prophets.

The next step in the foreign programs will be the British note to Germany, outlining its plan to complete the reparation problems This should be forthcoming within 48 hours. I am convinced political activity on the other side means a getting together to settle the Germany question On the surface the difference appears quite wide and difficult to bridge but the world is hoping for adjustment. I note another attempt is being made to unionize steel workers. Apparently the labor leaders are following the idea that persistence brings its own reward.

General news is scarce. The pronounced weakness in farm products is likely to intensify disappointment caused by yesterday's elections. This was something that could not have been discontinued but I doubt it will have anything more than passing effect. I see nothing at the moment to warrant expectations of sustained advance.

GAS COMPANY LATEST PREY

SALT LAKE CITY, July 17.—The gas company is the latest victim of the bootlegger's art, according to officers of the sheriff's office here, who assert they have uncovered moonshine-making meter tappers.

The officers state the manufacturer of illicit liquor has no desire to avoid an "honest" gas bill, but he fears an excessive use of gas will lead to suspicion and investigation Consequently the last word in 1923 model bootleggery calls for a device that forms an emergency pipe around the meter, giving the operator unlimited gas for his operations, without a foot of gas being registered

Appalachian Signs Up Martinsville and Turns Eye On City

electric energy manufacured is probably ten times greater than that turned out by the city. It requires about 30,000 horsepower to move the Schoolfield plant, it is said. Here again, however, the cost of operating the Schoolfield hydro electric station and the large steam turbines at Schoolfield as compared with the rate for power offered by the Appalachain Company would be the determining factor in securing a contract, with the odds probably in favor of home manufacture because of smaller margin of risk in interruptions in service which are necessarily increased where overland lines extend for many miles

Should the West Virginia concern make an attractive proposition it would not mean that the city plant would be put entirely out of commission Contracts with power companies usually provide that local power producing stations shall be kept in running order and ready to produce energy in the event of breakdown or interruption.

One interesting angle of the bringing to this section of electric power is the electrifcation of railways. The Virginian Railroad it is understood has already decided to resort to electric motive power which is to be supplied by the Appalachian Power Company.

MARTINSVILLE HAS SIGNED A CONTRACT

MARTINSVILLE, July 16.— At a special meeting of the city council here today a contract was signed with representatives of the Appalachian Power Company for the extension of that company's lines into this city. The signing of the contract should be Martinsville's longest step towards future prosperity in years, as it will no doubt bring numerous manufacturing plants that heretofore, have passed over the city because of a lack of electrical power Also it brings with it better power facilities for the present day Martinsville.

The Appalachian lines will be extended direct here from Radford, Va., a distance of about 50 or 60 miles and connected with the city lines here as all outlet of power will be directly through the city circuit. The contract calls for all the power needed up to 100,000 horsepower, which virtually assures several manufacturing industries that have announced their intention of locating here, when the necessary power had been secured. The contract drawn up is for a five-year period with a permit of extension by the city at that time for another five years. The wording further states that the extension and connection will be made within a 150-day period.

The announcement of the step taken by the city council is heralded with much elation by the city and surrounding country as it unwaveringly points the way for large industrial expansion.

It is reported that the cotton mills at Fieldale have contracted for a large amount of power. The high voltage wires leading to Martinsville will pass close to Fieldale and here they probably will be tapped to supply to Marshall-Field interests.

Farmer-Labor Now Controls Minn. by Johnson's Election

State Undergoes Political Transition When Real Dirt Farmer Wins U. S. Senatorship.

(By The Associated Press)

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 17.—Minnesota's representation in the U. S. Senate has been turned over to the farmer-labor party as the result of another political transition the state went through in the special senatorial election yesterday Magnus Johnson of Kimbell, Minnesota, a "real dirt" farmer gained the coveted post vacated by the recent death of Senator Knute Nelson. In 1800 of the state's 3,520 precincts Johnson has a lead of more than 27,000 votes over Governor J. A. Preus, Republican, with James A. Carley, Democrat, trailing as a poor third. Senator Elect Johnson will sit with Henry Shipstead who was elected last fall over Frank B. Kellog, Republican Senators Johnson and Shipstead are Farmer-Laborites and have announced their intention to affiliate with the followers of R. M. LaFollette in Congress. Though jubilant over his victory, the real dirt farmer senator was more concerned today about getting his haying done than things political and he sought to postpone statements incident to his election but did let drop a few remarks: "Well, boys," he said, "I put it over; I beat Jake Preus as I said I would. Now I can go home and help my son get the haying done After that I can do some more organizing before I go to Washington." Pressed for details of his organization plans he gave an excerpt from his campaign keynote speech.

"I will do this because I believe the farmers and the workers and the business men can by united action better their conditions" He was willing to let it be known in a semi-official way that he was against the world court and the League of Nations and any other foreign entanglement. For the present he preferred not to discuss recognition of Russia though 'between you and me I am for recognition of Russia though "between you and me. I am for recognition right now." Prohibition he passed over but expressed himself as for a soldiers' bonus payable out of excess profits.

The chairman of the Republican state central committee attributed the defeat of Governor Preus to the fact that "the best efforts of Republican workers were unable to overcome the evidence feeling of unrest with economic conditions which found its vent in a protest vote against the party in power." Governor Preus who has announced his support of the policies of the Harding administration which had lent a "Harding versus LaFollette" flavor to the election had nothing to add today to his brief statement thanking his supporters for their vote He will continue as governor until the expiration of his term, January 1, 1925.

The first would be from Lisbon to Japan, 9,870 miles; second, Japan to Newfoundland, 7,580 miles; third, Newfoundland to Lisbon by way of Fayal and Punta Delgada, 2,140 miles.

On the basis of an average speed of 70 miles an hour, the aviator would expect to spen 280 hours in the air.

BANKRUPTCY THREATENED

MEXICO CITY, July 16—The Mexican tramways company, a subsidiary of the Mexican light and power company, a Canadian concern, threatens to go into bankruptcy because of the imposition of an additional ten per cent tax on its total income. The company already is losing over 1,400,000 pesos ($750,-000) yearly.

After all it's EXPERIENCE that counts

ONE of our refineries makes nearly 200 different lubricants for various industries. If mechanical conditions in all motors and bearings were identical we could satisfy every need with one instead of 200. You would easily learn to tell good quality from bad. It would then be safe to say, "Give me a quart of oil," because almost everybody would make it good.

But requirements in automobile lubrication alone vary so much that it takes long experience and constant study to produce high-quality, dependable oils that insure absolute motor protection. We have had that experience. Polarine is the best oil we can conceive of for motor car lubrication. It is kept up to the minute by every chemical, physical or mechanical test known to science. It will pay you to be guided by the Polarine chart.

TELLS HOW TO ACT DURING A THUNDERSTORM

MILTON, Mass., July 16.—Get under cover if possible when a thunder storm threatens. If this is not practicable, lie down. That is the advice which Alexander G. McAdie, director of the Blue Hill Observatory in this town and professor of meteorology at Harvard University, gives in an explanation of the action of lightning prepared for The Associated Press. He gives what he describes as "ten good rules to help people take care of themselves."

"In a battle," says Prosessor McAdie, "a hundred bullets are fired for each soldier killed. It is something like this with lightning flashes. There are a hundred discharges for every bolt of lightning that hits a person. Fortunately, too, of every hundred streaks of lightning about ninety are from cloud t cloud or spill-over discharges of moderate electrical energy and are mostly horizontal, doing no damage whatever.

"About ten flashes in a hundred come vertically, that is, down to earth in a straight line. Some flashes come sideways and seem to be crooked, although there are really no flashes zigzagging like the teeth of a saw as artists generally depict lightning.

"The intense straight flashes are the ones to be feared and it is a silly person who stands out in the open when such flashes are seen. He invites trouble, but the invitations are not always accepted.

"At the time of the year thunderstorms are frequent and there are a comparatively large number of fatal accidents. One read in the press dispatches that four men are walking along a New Jersey beach during a thunderstorm. There is a flash of lightning and one man is killed outright, one severely burned, and the others stunned.

"Now there is no protection for a case like this unless one could carry around with him a metallic cover well grounded. The first rule is then: Do not stand under a tree in a field when heavy clouds are noticed or coming slowly from the west or south. Get under cover if possible. If this is not practicable, lie down. Don't remain standing.

"Second—Do not stand under a tree with thick foliage. You are forming a part of the line of discharge, since the body, more particularly the skin if moist is a better conductor than is the trunk of the tree. More people are killed by lightning in this way than probably any other.

"Third—Don't stand in the doorway of a barn or at a window in proximity of a chimney. There are currents of air or winds, and the lightning follows to some extent any draft or column of rising air, especially warm air.

"Fourth—Don't laugh at any one's nervousness during a severe thunder storm. There is a good reason to be nervous. Even if one is in a building that is struck the damage is, in ninety-eight cases out of a hundred confined to ripping out plaster or knocking off slates and tearing off any projection timbers. But there are times when the storm clouds descend to earth and amid darkness the flashes are heavy and numerous. At such times there is danger. It is dangerous to be near a chimney or a tree or a flagpole or a metal clothes-line.

"Fifth—Stock should not be tied near a wire fence.

"Sixth—There is no particular sense in going to bed. Standing on glass or rubber or any good insulator, a woden blanket for example, will give one a little more security and a great deal more confidence. The probability of a person in an ordinary residence building being struck is very slight.

"Seventh—If you are near a person who has been struck make every effort to resusciate him. Only rarely does lightning kill outright. Mostly people are stunned, and all that is needed is a little artificial respiration to restore them to consciousness. Of course get a doctor quick.

"Eighth—If you are in a trolly car and a flash comes in and burns the fuses with a roar and a blinding flash, sit still. The danger is over, and while you may be frightened you are not likely to be hurt.

"Ninth—If you have a radio, better cut it out during a thunder storm. The antennae should be grounded direct and all wires, as far as possible, kept outside.

"Tenth—If your house is provided with good lightning rods you need not have much fear. Moreover, dwelling houses in city blocks are practically safe."

ANOTHER ICE MINE FOUND

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 16—Pennsylvania has another ice mine, a natural refrigerating plant in an abandoned coal pit near Troutville. The first ice mine, discovered at Coudersport last Summer, already has become an attraction for tourists.

The new ice mine is on G. N. Rishell's farm. Cold air seeping in the winter cools the rocks to a temperature far below the freezing point, but no ice forms because the air is too dry.

In the Summer the whole shaft becomes moist and when coal was being mined there recently miners had to remove two or three carloads of ice every morning before they could get to work. This caused abandonment of the mine.

Rishell's neighbors now come to the shaft for their ice, chopping off the moisture which in the night has frozen to the walls.

These Bothersome Millions! Detectives Must Guard Them

Grim Background for Vast Fortunes.

BY DEBUTANTE.

NEW YORK.—How does that portion of society which is enormously rich protect itself from the danger of daring holdups?

There is an element in the brilliant background of wealthy men and women that is seldom recognized by the average public. This is the element of protection of their millions.

The J. Pierpont Morgans learned a terrific lesson in the Wall street explosion of September, 1920, in which thirty-nine persons lost their lives and three times that number sustained injury. The bomb exploded in Wall street, almost directly in front of the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. The property loss ran into millions.

Morgans Careful Now.

In the investigation which followed it was declared the bomb horror might have been averted had the Morgan bank been amply protected by guards.

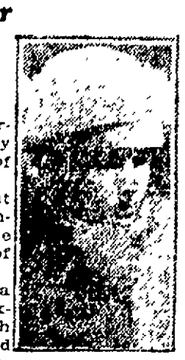

The Morgans are exceedingly careful now. Whenever they attend a semi-public occasion, like church services on Easter morning, Morgan detectives are on the job. The average person does not recognize them, for their badges are concealed under civilian clothes.

Four or five plain clothes men are on constant guard near the Morgan house at 231 Madison avenue.

Society women have somewhat lost the flair for wearing the entire contents of their jewel cases at the opera.

Danger of Jewelry.

This has come about partly through a general sartorial trend in the direction of simplicity, and partly because wealthy women have been advised of the danger of exhibiting a fortune in gems on throat, hair and hands.

Despite this retrenchment, the diamond horseshoe on gala nights at the Metropolitan still scintillates sufficiently to dazzle the moral vision of many persons. For this reason a full force of detectives is always on hand.

Paste Gems Foil Thief.

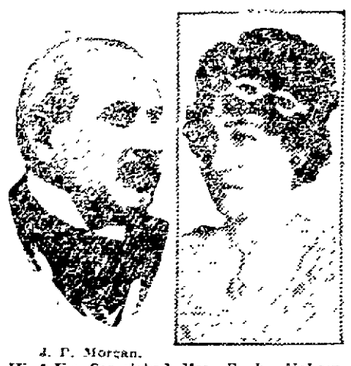

There was a time when society leaders, alarmed by frequent robberies, kept two sets of jewels, one genuine, the other paste. The genuine ornaments were kept in the family bank vaults while the imitations were worn fearlessly.

The uniformed footmen one sees in luxurious limousines often are not footmen at all. Frequently they are detectives in disguise. Chauffeurs sometimes are selected as much for their physical strength as for their knowledge of driving, that they may be a protection to their moneyed employers in the event of trouble.

The Rockefeller children, including Abby, a recent debutante, have been carefully guarded since birth, although, thanks to Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr.'s efforts, they have been unaware of this.

Death the Unconquerable.

Even detectives, though their number be legion, sometimes are ineffectual, as was shown in the tragic case of little Vinson McLean, the "hundred million dollar baby." This child of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean of Washington, although surrounded by nurses and plain clothes men, one day ran out of his yard and was killed under the wheels of an automobile—as any poor child in New York's crowded east side might die.

Ship Liquor Ban Can't Be Lifted

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 16—Congress is powerless, in the opinion of Senator Sterling, Republican, South Dakota, one of the dry leaders in the Senate to lift the ban on the carrying liquor on foreign ships within American territorial waters, but it has ample authority to give government craft the right to search and seize rum runners 12 miles from shore.

Senator Sterling announced today he would revise his bill to establish a 12-mile prohibition enforcement limit at the next session if the state department in the meantime does not negotiate a treaty to that end with maritime powers. At the same time, however, he expressed the opinion that no relief can be extended through constitution amending the prohibition enforcement laws to foreign shipping companies, forbidden by the recent Supreme Court decision to bring liquor within the American 3-mile limit.

"The Supreme Court based its decision on the constitutional amendment itself and not on any act of Congress to enforce it," Senator Sterling declared. "The only avenue open to change or in any way modify the sweep of the decision must therefore be by the repeal of the 18th amendment. In my judgment any such action is of such a remote contingency that it need not be considered. It is a situation which we cannot affect by legislation."

The South Dakota Senator predicted an attempt would be made to put through a law prohibiting American vessels from having intoxicating liquors aboard while on the high seas.

BROKER SHOOTS SELF AND DIES

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

MILDFORD, Conn., July 16.—Smith Weygant, a broker with offices at 115 Broadway, New York, who was to have been a defendant in an action involving $60,000 given to him for investment, shot himself through the heart here today and died instantly.

Weygant and his wife were preparing to leave for New York when the broker went into a wash room of the cottage. A few minutes later Mrs. Weygant heard a shot and the body of her husband was found. Dr. Fisher the medical examiner was only able to learn that the broker had committed suicide for financial reasons. He had been much worried, Dr. Fisher learned, over his impending trial.

TWENTY INSURANCE COMPANIES INVOLVED

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 16.—Twenty large insurance companies are said to be involved in the Chicago underwriting syndicate by which a $1,000,000 policy on the life of Thomas E. Mitten in favor of the Mitten management, Inc., was underwritten. Though the Mitten organization, Mr. Mitten operates trolley lines here and in Buffalo.

Anderson Makes Serious Charges Against Banton

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 16—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, now under grand jury investigation on charges of grand larceny, forgery, and extortion, today appealed to Governor Smith, for an opportunity to submit at a hearing by the attorney general or some other official, proof that District Attorney Banton had promised to "put Anderson out of business," declaring that step would "make me governor."

The promise was made, Mr. Anderson declared he could prove, to Mrs. O. Bertsall Phillips, wife of the former league solicitor, who is principal witness against Anderson. Even after Phillips had signed a waiver of all claims against Anderson or the league, the superintendent declared he could prove, Banton "compelled" Phillips to go through with the case against him for the purpose of satisfying his political ambitions.

Mr. Anderson's statement said he also had called on Governor Smith "summarily to remove Mr. Banton and any and all of his staff from further charge of this particular proceeding." Mr. Anderson developed his charges against Mr. Banton in a series of reading questions, which he challenged the district attorney to deny, declaring he wanted to further "get the goods on him."

BANTON MAKES DENIAL

NEW YORK, July 16.—District Attorney Banton tonight flatly denied charges made today by William H. Anderson, State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York that the district attorney had promised to put Anderson out of business, declaring that such a step would "make me governor."

Mr. Anderson, who is now under grand jury investigation on charges of grand larceny, forgery and extortion, appealed to Governor Smith for an opportunity to submit proof of his charges at a hearing conducted by the attorney general or some other official.

Mr. Banton, in denying the charges, declared it Mr. Anderson's duty to lay all the facts before the governor.

"The governor should remove me if it is true, but he won't. You can't get Mr. Anderson under oath at any time."

Mr. Banton declared he absolutely had no ambition to be gov. and asserted that present indications were that he had had enough of public office.

CAMPBELL CONVICTS MAPP LAW VIGLATORS

(By The Associated Press)

RUSTBURG, Va., July 16.—Ten indictments involving violation of prohibition laws were handed to the grand jury at the opening of Circuit court here this morning. This afternoon ten true bills were returned, whereupon three defendants pleaded guilty and were fined $50 each and execution of sixty days prison term deferred. Of two other defendants, one was found not guilty and the other guilty and fined $50.

FARM and GARDEN BY FRANK RIDGWAY

LEGHORN LAYS 1,300 EGGS; STRUTS BY ALL LIVING HENS.

LADY ANNE, a 10 year old hen, owned by Lyle Funk, a farmer near Bloomington, Ill., has laid 1,300 eggs, and her owner believes this is the biggest basket of eggs credited to any hen living today. The world's record is said to be 1,355 eggs made by a hen that is now dead.

Lady Anne, of the Funk poultry plant is a white leghorn and is of real nobility, as nobility goes in the feathery kingdom. Her mother came from England. She was hatched in an incubator on Mr. Funk's farm south of Bloomington ten years ago, and began producing eggs when she was only a few months old, and has been at it ever since.

This hen with her lily white plumage, although old as age goes with chickens, visits her nest about as often today as she did in her flapper pullet days. Mr. Funk says that the hen is in good health and he is confident that she will break the world's record and then set a new mark that will stand for many years.

Despite the fact that it is egg factory only weighs four pounds and thirteen ounces. Lady Anne has produced 171 pounds of eggs during her lifetime. It is claimed that in the history of poultry raising only twenty-five hens have exceeded the thousand mark in egg production. Mr. Funk expects Lady Anne to live long enough to produce more than 200 more eggs, exceeding the 1,500 mark.

Wilson Will Not Testify Because Of His Condition

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 16—It was decided today that Woodrow Wilson would not be called to testify in the trial of Charles W. Morse and others charged with defrauding the government but arrangements were made to call the former president's son-in-law, William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, to the witness stand either tomorrow or Wednesday, Mr. McAdoo arrived today.

The decision not to have Mr. Wilson take the stand was reached at a conference between Milton J. Lambert, associate counsel for the defense, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Mr. Wilson's physician, at which Dr. Grayson expressed the opinion that the former president's physical condition made his appearance in court inadvisable.

Mr. Lambert said that Mr. Wilson's testimony would not be sought in any other form and that no deposition from him would be taken. Testimony desired from Mr. Wilson, he added, would not have been of great importance to the defense as it would have dealt chiefly with his observations of the progress of shipbuilding at the Morse yards in Alexandria, Va., in May, 1918, when he visited the plant.

Mr. McAdoo's law firm at one time represented the Alexandria company of the Morses, and his testimony is expected to deal with his knowledge of the firm's operations, particularly in the city to the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The trial entered its thirteenth week day with defense counsel hopeful they could conclude their testimony in another week.

SWALLOWING OF SNAKE BY WOMAN ABSURD STORY

RICHMOND, Va., July 16.—Physicians and internes at Memorial Hospital are contending with a hydra-headed reptile. Several days ago a rumor made it appearance and like a serpent itself, has been going the rounds of gossip, to the effect that a woman was brought to the hospital and that an operation, most scientific and delicate in nature, performed, by which a rattlesnake, swallowed by a woman in her youth, was extracted. Despite repeated denials, the rumor comes every day, they state.

Annoyed by scores of inquiries and visits from many persons who desire to know all about the strange case, the hospital authorities have issued a request that announcement be definitely made that there is no patient at the hospital suffering from the effects of having swallowed a snake.

"It is a medical and chemical impossibility for a snake to live in the human anatomy," said one of the physicians yesterday, in commenting on the report. "Of course, a small snake might be swallowed by an individual, but it would soon die from the action of the digestive acids and ferments in the stomach. The report is one of the most absurd I have ever heard."

The physicians state that one man appeared at the hospital a day or two ago and stated that he was possessed of some wealth and influence and would be glad to pay for being let into the secret and mysteries of the swallowed snake. The hospital authorities, as well as they could, disabused him of the idea.

MESSENGER BOY GUIDE SERVICE

RICHMOND, Va., July 16—Effective Sunday the Western Union Telegraph Company began its "messenger motor guide service" in the leading cities of the South, including Richmond. The purpose of the plan is to have a boy meet the incoming motorist and direct him to the best route into the city proper. A telephone call to the office, or a wire ahead will have the boy at the spot desired. The "messenger-guide" will remain with the tourist even after the city is reached to point out the various points of interest and eliminate many useless hours of searching.

Situated halfway between the North and the South and rich in history, Richmond has been selected as one of the cities where the service is to be inaugurated. Local officials of the Western Union promise a high type of youngsters to act as guides. All the boys have been special instruction in the traffic regulations of the city.

The service was placed in operation simultaneously in the leading Southern cities. Announcement from the headquarters of the Western Union is that for the present the "messenger-guide" will be operated only in the South.

BEHOLD! A MOTORIST WHO'S GONE BACK ON HIS CAR!

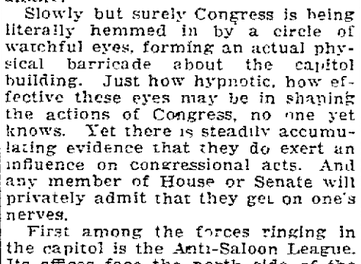

HUNT'S WEEKLY LETTER

BY HARRY B. HUNT

(Special to The Bee.)

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Loyalty to one's car comes second only to loyalty to one's family in the creed of most auto owners. In the usual exception, places are simply reversed, the car coming first.

No matter how decrepit, how balky, cantankerous or sputtery the old bus may be, 999 owners out of 1000 will tell how good an old boat she is, anyway, extolling all her virtues and good points, recounting her long and valiant service and condoning any present faults.

But there is in Washington one traitor to the brotherhood. He not only knocks his own car, but does it publicly, flagranty and in a way to attract maximum attention.

It's a good looking car, almost new. But across its sides and back he has painted in blazing yellow letters a foot high:

"STUNG! NO GOOD!

"This Car is a———. It's a Lemon."

On the doors on each side he has painted a huge lemon, the size of a wooden bucket, with the explanatory phrase: "This Car's a Lemon."

Doubtless the owner has had a clash with the agency from which the car was bought. But apparently the bus runs all right, for one sees it all over town. For a lemon, it certainly does travel!

"Keeping an eye on Congress" has become more than a mere byword expressing an interest in governmental affairs.

Slowly but surely Congress is being literally hemmed in by a circle of watchful eyes, forming an actual physical barricade about the capitol building. Just how hypnotic, how effective these eyes may be in shaping the actions of Congress, no one yet knows. Yet there is steadily accumulating evidence that they do exert an influence on congressional acts. And any member of House or Senate will privately admit that they get on one's nerves.

First among the forces ringing in the capitol is the Anti-Saloon League. Its offices face the north side of the capitol grounds, fronting directly on the Senate wing.

To the east, watching over both House and Senate, are the new headquarters of the National Women's Party. There a busy bunch of watchers is ever on the alert.

Farther south, and flanking the Women's Party forces, are the watchers on the National Reform Bureau, while completing the cordon stands the headquarters of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

These are the organizations that deal with Congress collectively. They hold Congress in a circle of perpetual watchfulness.

The lobbies of big business and private interests with axes to grind, dealing with members individually rather than collectively, maintain their offices uptown. They don't like perpetual watching any better than Congress does!

General Henri Joseph Eugene Gouraud, the one-armed French hero of the Champagne offensive who has just paid us a visit, paid a call on former President Wilson before leaving Washington.

Wilson, it seems, desiring to welcome the French general appropriately, had descended to the reception hall to greet him and Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand when they called.

As the butler threw open the door, admitting the party, watchers outside saw the bristling bearded Gouraud clasp the former president in a hearty one-armed embrace and bestow a resounding kiss on each cheek.

Newspapermen who have tried to get good "inside" stories of the operations of the bootleg ring by way of the prohibition enforcement office find an explanation of the difficulties encountered in the syndicated series of stories prepared by Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes.

In a series of 43 articles, placed with papers in large cities throughout the country, Haynes will tell the inside story of bootleg operations, presenting specific cases and details heretofore kept secret.

It is just such specific information and details which newspapermen have sought. In the main, however, they have had to be satisfied with generalities. The lid has been kept tight on all the unit's more important operations. Agents and operatives were under orders not to discuss cases with newspapermen. Only Haynes or his assistant, Jim Jones, might do that. And they usually have shed little light on specific matters inquired into.

Now, however, the lid is off—to Haynes. It ought to be an interesting series. Perhaps, also, profitable. But even at best syndicate rates the return Haynes will get will look like small potatoes beside the $300,000 bribe which he will tell was offered one government agent to "look the other way."

HINKLE PARDONS LIBEL EDITOR

SANTEFE, July 16.—Governor Hinkle this afternoon issued pardons to Carl C. Magee, editor of the New Mexico 'State Tribune' convicted of the charge of criminal libel on chief justice Parker of the State Supreme Court and of the contempt of eighth judicial court.

Magee was sentenced to the penitentiary from 1 year to 18 months on criminal libel charges and 360 days in the San Miguel county jail of the contempt charge.

The governor said Sunday he would take no action until Magee had exhausted means of redress in the courts and his action that came as surprise.

The Governor in issuing a pardon on the sentence for alleged libel, declared the indictment on which MaGee was tried seemed to be a "conspiracy and more of a persecution than a prosecution."

In the pardon of the contempt the Governor also remitted the fine and costs of $7 imposed on MaGee on four citations, and also imposed on the MaGee Publishing company, aggregating $4,050. In this pardon Governor Hinkle said he was of the opinion that they contempt cases also were a persecution, that the sentences" are harsh and beyond reason and that this whole procedure is a disgrace and a blot upon the name of New Mexico and the good people thereof."

TELLEGEN FILES THREE MOTIONS

NEW YORK, July 16.—Three motions filed by Lou Tellegen in Brooklyn supreme court today disclosed that he had been sued by Harry N. Steinfeld, an attorney for $10,000 legal services, presumably in the divorce action recently won by Geraldine Farrar.

Although the attorney's suit does not state the nature of his services for Tellegen, the dates he named cover the period of the Farrar Tellegen divorce contest.

The Tellegen motions seek an extension of the time in which to reply to the $10,000 suit; a change of venue from Queens of New York county and an order directing Steinfeld to submit a bill of particulars describing what he was engaged to do for the actor and what sort of contract he had.

PAW PAW CALLED THE PERFECT DIGESTER

Scientist Explains Its Tonic Effect Upon the System, Saying It Makes Dyspepsia Impossible.

In condensed form, the following is what Professor Willard H. Morse, M. D., F. S. S., a Fellow of the London Society of Science, wrote to Robert Halford, an eminent therapeutist:

"Munyon's Paw Paw is scientific in that it properly presents to the materia medica—to the medical profession and to the sick and suffering the active principleship of the fruit of the caricapapaya (Paw Paw) in its most eligible form.

"It accomplishes digestion surely and perfectly. It makes the most of the food. Makes the best of the food. Assures perfect assimilation. It perfects the several fluids that have to do with digestion and makes dyspepsia impossible.

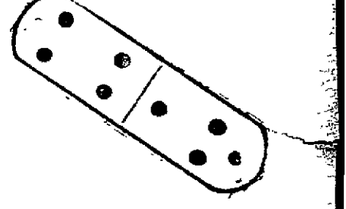

"Munyon's Paw Paw dispossesses from the blood all faulty acids or poisons, because the blood made from the food treated by Paw Paw is a true vital fluid, which refuses to contain the acids, germs or poisonous taints, and as most diseases arise from impure blood, it makes all of them impossible."

If you are nervous, if you are weak, if you have indigestion in any form, if you have stomach trouble, if you cannot sleep, try Munyon's Paw Paw Tonic. It has stopped those conditions for thousands and may for you. It costs $1 per bottle and is for sale at all first-class drug stores. Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co., Scranton, Pa.

A VICTORY FOR LA FOLETTE

Politics is an abstract thing until it becomes involved with the commonplaces of everyday life, then it becomes something vital. Republican leaders who showed anxiety when the bottom dropped out of the wheat market have had their worst fears realized for Magnus Johnson, of Minnesota, a "dirt" farmer, was yesterday elected to succeed the late Senator Knute Nelson from that state, defeating Gov. J. A. O. Preus, the straight-out Republican candidate and the man who was backed by President Harding. When a lead of 18,000 votes was registered by Johnson who is an adherent to the LaFollette reactionary group and who ran on the farmer-labor ticket, Governor Preus early today conceded the election to his [illegible]. There is small comfort to the Republicans in this special election and there is less comfort to the rest of us when it is recognized that Johnson is avowedly a student in the school of LaFollette and stands on identically the same platform as the Wisconsin trouble-maker. Despite Mr. Johnson's earnest protestations that he wears no man's collar it will be hard to disguise a very definite liaison with his mentor. The Minnesota election is a hard blow to Republican aspirations. It is a sort of feeler on the eve of a presidential year with barometric significance Notwithstanding the President's well sustained oratory on in western trip and his invasion of the wheat fields of Kansas, dollar wheat has minimized the potency of his visit and has stalked like a ghost among Minnesota farmers who have not fared any too well under the Harding administration

Magnus Johnson ran on a very definite platform. He stressed his ultra "dry" record, was opposed to a world court and the arbitration of differences between nations, favored amendments to the tariff which would unburden the people of some of the present heavy taxes and the modification of the nullification powers of the Supreme court. He was openly for a soldier bonus to be paid out of the excess profits tax.

Governor Preus, bearer of the Harding standard advocated co-operative marketing as the salvation of the farming class from many ills, revision of the tariff downward and for the development of internal waterways He favored a world court but was ominously silent on the prohibition question [illegible] pointing to his record on the [illegible] as governor.

Johnson's apparent election has upset Republican calculations. It was confidently expected that he would win. Johnson's [illegible] shows in convincing fashion [illegible] extent the tenets of LaFollette have come to be accepted in the state of Minnesota

WALL STREET.

[illegible] its [illegible] New York city was known as New Amsterdam and [illegible] by the Dutch, it feared an attack from nearby English colonies [illegible] invaders, the inhabitants [illegible] and thick planks. The barrier that gradually came into existence made this stockade [illegible]. The wooden wall [illegible] high, with [illegible]. To withstand [illegible] braced on the [illegible] banked-up earth. New Amsterdam finally was captured [illegible] the Duke of York and renamed New York in honor of the [illegible]. It wasn't much of a [illegible] at the time, [illegible] surrendering. The [illegible] some tall fighting [illegible] the future value of [illegible] aside the wooden wall.

It gives you an idea of how primitive things were, less than 300 years ago, when you stop to consider that a stockade 12 feet high was considered a reasonable defense against an attacking army. Compare with modern fortifications and you realize the progress made by the devilish ingenuity of man in the matter of military devices. One large bomb dropped from a modern airplane, would have annihilated the old wall and most of the village it protected. By another two years France expects to have 7000 military airplanes of high-power battle type. She already has 1250, against England's 600, America's 445 and Japan's 250.

The whole scheme and also the futility of armaments is graphically illustrated by the comparison of modern armaments with the wooden stockade from which Wall street got its name. Go back in history and you find men inventing shields that were impenetrable by spear or arrow. Then came gunpowder and the bullet that would pierce shields. It's a merry-go-round system, alternately working out a means of protection, then a means to counteract the protection. The steel industry one year perfects a battleship armorplate that no shell can penetrate. Then comes a shell that penetrates anything existing to date. Then a stronger armorplate, next a more powerful shell . . so on, generation after generation. The armaments race goes on now, as in the past, thinly disguised. Somehow humanity cannot get the fact through its dense brain, that there is no perfect protection or defense and no last word in offensive weapons. No matter what any one invents for offense or defense, some one soon discovers a device that counteracts it. Of all stupid and asinine follies, the armaments race is easily the leader. And will be, until the people strip their politicians of the power to declare war.

WILL HE BE ON HAND?

(Baltimore Sun.)

The release of Roland R. Pothier from jail at Providence, R. I., where he has been imprisoned for nine months in connection with the death of Major Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Washington, in 1918, raises a question of moral responsibility. Pothier has confessed several times that he murdered Major Cronkhite at the instigation of a brother officer, and he has also recanted several times. He has never been forced to give deliberate testimony before a military or a civil tribunal directly charged with an investigation of Major Cronkhite's death. The war department has failed to assemble a court for that purpose. And he has escaped the processes of federal tribunals and the courts of Washington state because all of them have united in declaring that they were without jurisdiction.

Thus Pothier, the most important witness in the case, as well as the actual assassin, according to his own confessions, goes free because of a legal technicality that makes Camp Lewis at the time of the tragedy a judicial no man's land. If this legal logic is sound, a thousand murders there on the day Major Cronkhite was killed would not have been punishable by anybody. It is this situation which creates a moral responsibility for the safe-keeping of Pothier. There is virtually certain to be an investigation of this case by Congress at its next session, and if Pothier should disappear before that time, or meet with an accident, public suspicion would be fanned to a fierce flame.

Is anybody or any department of the government interested enough to make sure that Pothier will be on hand when called?

AMBASSADORS' INCOMES.

Competent persons who have inquired into the various bureaus at Washington, every one of them the creation of Congress have usually come to the conclusion that the U. S. government is a great deal better served than Congress deserves. This is unquestionably the case with our diplomatic service, but the extent to which that service is crippled by sham democracy is becoming a glaring evil. A congressman from the middle west, who never saw the sea or any other country than his own, and precious little of that, talks about "democratic simplicity" as an example to other nations, and thinks it may be attained by paying an ambassador less than a living wage.

There is no democratic simplicity in starving to death. There is no democratic simplicity in fixing the salary of an ambassador so low that only a man of large private means can afford to take the job. The effect is rather to make diplomacy the special province of the rich. When we pay our ambassador at London $17,000 a year we do not realize that the expenses of his position. The late Whitelaw Reid paid as rent for Dorchester House in Park Lane £7000 a year, which is practically twice the salary, without a penny for housekeeping. It is safe to say that no ambassador to the court of St. James, even without the wealth of the Mills family behind him, has been able to hold the embassy at London at a cost of less than $60,000 a year in the past half century.

DRAKES BRANCH, July 17.—(Grapevine Wireless.)—Second day of the first half of the week and the days are getting shorter day by day. The excursion season is in full bloom and S. S. picnics are going on apace. In this age of speed and efficiency one must be up and doing or down and out; there are no half-way houses along the pike; only filling stations to add more fuel to the chase. All of which reminds us of the latest Ford story:

An applicant for work at the Ford Plant asked a veteran Ford employe if it were true that the company was always finding methods of speeding up production by using fewer men. The veteran replied, "Most certainly!" "Infact," he continued, "I had a dream which illustrates the point. Mr. Ford was dead, and I could see the pallbearers carrying his body. Suddenly the procession stopped. Mr. Ford had come to life. As soon as the casket was opened, he sat upright, and on seeing six pallbearers, cried out at once: 'Put this casket on wheels, and lay off five men.'"

Lady, for Heaven's Sake, Shoot!

I've a tale to tell of a burglar bold
Who went to rob a house;
He opened a window and crept inside
As quiet as a mouse.
He looked all around with his pocket light,
He didn't need a guide;
But if he had known 'twas an old maid's house
He wouldn't have gone inside.

He took all the silver from a rusty old safe
And put it in his bag;
He saw the old maid's picture that hung on the wall
And said, "Wow! what an awful nag!"
Just then downstairs he heard a noise,
And to himself he said:
"Look out, there's someone coming up.
Oh, boy! Get under the bed."

At 9 o'clock the maid came in,
She had an ugly face;
She was so sleepy and tired out
She forgot to look over the place.
She took out her teeth and the big glass eye,
And the hair from off her head;
The burglar had a million fits
As he looked from under the bed.

From under the bed the burglar crept,
He was a total wreck;
He tried to get out as fast as he could
But she grabbed him around the neck.
The old maid wasn't scared a bit,
She was as cool as a clam;
"Ha! ha!" she said, "the saints preserved,
At last I've found a man."

From under the pillow a pistol she took
And to the burglar said:
"Young man, if you don't marry me,
I'll shoot off the top of your head."
The burglar almost fell to the floor,
He couldn't even whisper or toot;
He looked at her teeth and her big glass eye,
And said, "Lady, for Heaven's sake shoot."—Selected.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Mark Brendon, criminal investigator, is engaged by Jenny Pendean to solve the mystery of the disappearance of her husband, Michael. Pendean is last seen in the company of Jenny's uncle, Robert Redmayne. Robert goes into hiding and sends for his brother Bendigo to meet him in a secret cave. Both men disappear and the cave shows evidence of a terrible struggle.

Jenny marries Giuseppe Doria, who works for her uncle, Bendigo. They go to live in Italy where Jenny's uncle Albert Redmayne lives. Peter Ganns, famous American detective, assists Brendon in the investigation. When Doria is arested Jenny is killed by the bullet intended for her husband when she throws herself in front of him to save his life.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Her grandfather still lived, when first I met her, and the extent or disposition of his wealth seldom entered our calculations.

But a year passed; Jenny was ready to wed me and begin life as my twin star; while I longed for her with a great longing. The situation cleared; her grandfather died; she would presently be the possessor of ample means and I already enjoyed an income from the business of Pendean and Trecarrow.

Then came the war and the sentence of death incidently pronounced by that event upon the brothers Redmayne. Their own folly and lack of vision were alone responsible. I did not argue with them; it was enough that Jenny swiftly awakened to even a bitterer hatred and a deeper fury of resentment than myself. They had roused the sleeping tempest and our lightning now became only a question of time.

I evaded active service with a heart drug, as did some thousands of other intelligent men. I kept a whole skin, stopped at home and received for my share the Order of the British Empire instead of a nameless grave. It was easy enough.

Meantime we volunteered and our record of service at Princetown Moss Depot is not to be assailed.

Already my future intention was coloring my life. I grew a beard, wore glasses and pretended delicacy of constitution: for after the war was done I intended murdering three men, and I proposed to do so in such a maner that society would find it impossible to associate me with the crimes.

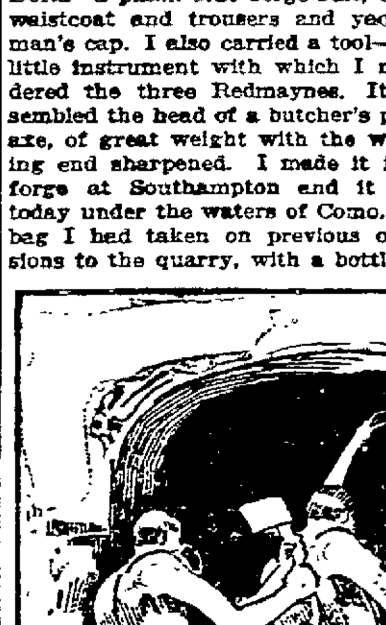

We pretended an affection for Dartmoor. As an example of our far-reaching methods I may relate how we returned to the wilderness after the war was done and actually began to build a bungalow upon it, which, needless to say, we never had the least intention of occupying.

I had designed first to destroy Bendigo and Albert Redmayne, who had never seen me, and finally deal with my old friend, Robert: but it was he who came at the critical moment as a lamb to the slaughter and so inspired the superb conception now familiar to the civilized world.

The time was ripe to pluck these men who had insulted and outraged me; and when Bendigo Redmayne advertised for a motor boatman, the challenge was accepted. I forged certain foreign letters of commendation. He liked Italians, from experience of them aboard ship, and he appreciated my letter and my imaginary war record.

What was the next step? An entreaty from Jenny that I should shave my beard! She begged again and again and appealed to Robert, who supported her. I withstood them until the day of his destruction. Upon that morning I appeared without it and they congratulated me. Other trifling preliminaries there were. On one occasion, when my wife rode down to Plymouth with her uncle on his motor bicycle, she left him to do some shopping and, visiting Burnell's the theatrical costumer, she purchased a reg wig for a woman. At home again she transferred it into a red wig for a man. Meantime I had made a pair of large mustaches, helping myself when Mrs. Gerry, our landlady, was out of the way to heir from the brush of one of her stuffed foxes, whose color exactly resembled the rufous adornments of Robert Redmayne.

When we started on his motor cycle, after tea, to do some work at the bungalow, I took a handbag containing my costume as Giuseppe Doria—a plain, blue serge suit, coat, waistcoat and trousers and yechtsman's cap. I also carried a tool—the little instrument with which I murdered the three Redmaynes. It resembled the head of a butcher's pole-axe, of great weight with the working end sharpened. I made it in a forge at Southampton and it lies today under the waters of Como. My bag I had taken on previous occasions to the quarry, with a bottle of whisky and glasses, so Robert thought it not strange that I should do so again.

We started for Foggintor and it was still broad daylight when we got there. I had already studied the quarry and determined on Robert Redmayne's resting place. You will find him—and the suit of clothes I was wearing that evening—in the moraine, where it opens fanwise from the cliff above and spreads into the bottom beneath.

Arrived at the bungalow, Robert's first demand was a bath in the quarry pool. To this I had accustomed him and we stripped and swam for ten minutes. When we returned from the pool into the shelter of the bungalow it was a naked man I smote and dropped with one blow of my formidable weapon. His back was turned and the pole-axe head went through his skull like butter.

The gloaming had long thickened to darkness when I went my way and laid the trail through Two Bridges, Postbridge and Ashburton to Brixham. Once only was I bothered—at the gate across the road by Brixham coast-guard station; but I lifted the motor bicycle over it and presently ascended to the cliffs of Berry Head. Fate favored me in details, for, despite the hour, there were witnesses to every step of the route.

On the cliff I emptied my sack, cast its stuffing to the winds, fastened my handbag to the bicycle, thrust the blood-stained sack into a rabbit hole, where it could not fail to be discovered, and then returned to Robert Redmayne's lodging at Paignton. There a telegram had already been sent informing the landlady of his return that night.

I changed into the serge suit, cap and brown shoes of Doria and packed Redmayne's clothes, tweeds and showy waistcoat, boots and stockings into my handbag with the wig and mustaches and my weapon.

I walked to Newton Abbot and reached that town before six o'clock. At the railway station I breakfasted and presently took a train to Dartmouth. Before noon I reached "Crow's Nest" and made acquaintance with Bendigo Redmayne.

But he had little leisure for me at this moment, for there had already come news from his niece of the mysterious fatality on Dartmoor.

Needless to say that my thoughts were now entirely devoted to my wife and I longed for her first communication. Our briefest separation caused me pain, for our souls were as one and we had not been parted, save for my visit to Southampton, since our marriage day.

It was her exquisite thought to involve the man from Scotland Yard.

When I sought to destroy him on Griante and believed that I had done so, the man displayed an ingenuity for which I did not give him credit and unconsciously laid the foundations of subsequent disaster.

The letter which Bendigo Redmayne received, and supposed had come from his brother at Plymouth, was posted by Jenny on her journey to "Crow's Nest." We had written it together a week earlier and studied her uncle's indifferent penmanship very carefully before doing so.

We proposed to let six months pass before the death of Bendigo Redmayne, and we were already contemplating details and considering how best to bring his brother back upon the stage for the purpose of Ben's destruction, when Mark Brendon blundered in upon us once again.

I swiftly brought Robert Redmayne to life; and though, with more leisure for refinements, I should not have clothed him in his old attire, yet that crude detail possessed a value of its own and certainly served to deceive Brendon.

Of subsequent events, most are so familiar that there is no need to retrace them.

My tears fall when I think of my incomparable Jenny and her astounding mastery of minutiae at "Crow's Nest"—her finesse and exquisite touch, her kittenlike delicacy, her cat-like swiftness and sureness. The two beings involved were as children in her hands. Oh, precious phoenix of a woman, you and I were of the same spirit, kneaded into our clay!

I say that accident made a radical alteration of design vital, for I had intended, on the night when Robert Redmayne would come and see Bendigo, to murder the old sailor in his tower room and remove him before morning with my wife's assistance. But the victim postponed his own destruction, for upon the night when his death was intended, during my previous conversation with him touching Jenny, I had perceived, by his clumsy glances and evidence of anxiety, that somebody else was in the tower room—unseen.

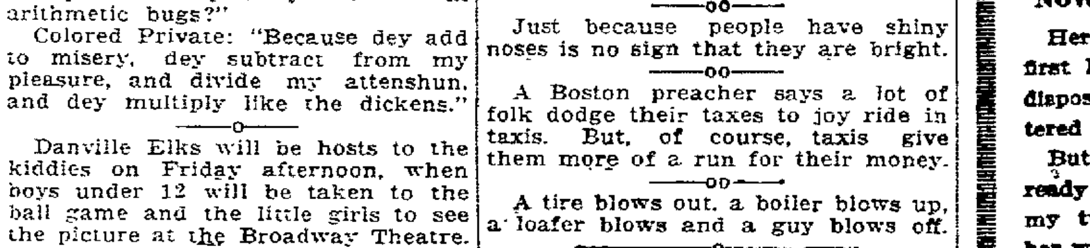

There was but one hiding place and but one man likely to occupy it. I did not indicate that I had discovered the secret and it was not the detective who gave himself away; but, once alive to his presence, I swiftly marked a flash of light at one of the little ventilation holes in the cupboard and perceived that our sleuth stood hid within it.

Having conveyed the old sailor to the cave, where, on my recent run up the coast after dropping Brendon, I had already looked in and lighted the lamp, I landed behind him and, as his foot touched the shore, the pole-axe fell. He was dead in an instant and five minutes later his blood ran upon the sand.

Once more my amazing wife and I parted for a brief period and then I had the joy of introducing her to Italy, where the remainder of our task awaited us.

And now for Italy. It is true that in my early manhood I had suffered a sad accident at Naples, the secret of which was known to my mother and myself alone. I therefore entertained some grudge against her country; but the fact at no time lessened my love for the south.

SERIOUS AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Young Society Matrons Badly Hurt, One Perhaps Fatally.

Mrs. John Alden Prescott and Mrs. Harry Ellington were picked up unconscious about four miles out of the city on the Post Road at 10 o'clock this morning.

When found the car was overturned and Mrs. Prescott was pinned under it. She is very badly, perhaps fatally, injured.

Both she and Mrs. Ellington were rushed by Stanley Roberts to the Flower Hospital a few moments after he found them.

Mrs. Ellington regained consciousness in about an hour. She said they were motoring at a moderate speed for pleasure when something broke and Mrs. Prescott lost control of the car.

Both women were paralyzed with fright and neither had time to say anything, reported Mrs. Ellington, before the car catapulted down a slight embankment and into a telegraph pole.

Mrs. Ellington knew nothing more until she awoke in the Flower Hospital. Mrs. Prescott has not yet recovered consciousness.

Both women are among the most popular in the smart set of Albany. Mrs. Prescott came here a bride a few months ago and she has already made many friends.

Mrs. Joseph Graves Hamilton, Mrs. Prescott's mother, is on her way here and Mr. Hamilton has wired for the most famous brain specialists and surgeons from New York and Philadelphia to attend his daughter. They are speeding to Albany as fast as possible.

A carefull overhauling of the car this afternoon showed that the rod to which the steering wheel is attached had broken.

The accident is most distressing as both Mr. and Mrs. Prescott and Mr. and Mrs. Ellington have hosts of friends in the city.

BUSINESS GOOD IN INSURANCE

RICMOND, July 16.—During the 12 months ending May 1, insurance companies doing business in Virginia set a new record in the amount of business done, and paid into the state treasury the sum of $985,489.73, or practically one-tenth of the total revenue of the state. In the previous year the total amount of taxes paid by the insurance companies was $933,873.04.

Of this sum, the life companies paid $521,303.43; disability and double indemnity, $9,604.43; fire, $311,-672.47; domestic mutual fire, $2,-622.66; industrial and sick benefit, $44,790.07; specific license tax, $4,000; miscellaneous, $101,596.45.

In addition to the above sum, the state bureau of insurance set aside the amount of $28,855.93 from workmen's compensation insurance, but this sum was turned over to the industrial commission of Virginia for claim accounts.

The life companies doing business in this state collected $23,169,041.55 in premiums during the year and the fire companies collected $11,329,-910.77. The Metropolitan Life paid the largest tax of any company, life or fire, with the Life Insurance company of Virginia next.

SEEKS CLINIC FOR DIABETES

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

NEW YORK, July 16—A clinic for the treatment of diabetes, probably to be located in Harlem, is being sought by Dr. C. Legiardi Laura, following his declaration that a serum developed by himself has effected permanent cures in half of the cases which he has treated.

Dr. Laura's serum was first described in 1919, long before the effects of the famous Toronto insulin treatment were noted. While the insulin treatment is directed at the pancreatic gland, Dr. Laura's serum is intended to offset the incorrect functioning of the pituitary gland situated at the base of the brain, which, he claims, is more nearly the cause of diabetes than the pancreas.

The serum is derived from the pituitary glands of sheep and is cheaper than insulin.

Dr. Laura was once assistant professor of medicine in the University of Turin and chief assistant to Cesare Lombroso, famous Italian criminologist.

MONTH-OLD BABY FOUND IN HOTEL

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

NEW YORK, July 16.— A month old girl baby was found today in a room in the Hotel Marlborough, Thirty-sixth street and Broadway, which had been vacated the evening before by a couple registered as "Mr. and Mrs. H. Williams, Baltimore." A hotel maid found the infant, nestled among pillows on the bed. No trace of the parents could be found, nor was there any identification marks on the child's clothing. The baby was taken to Bellevue's foundling ward by Mary Hicks, telephone operator. The infant is in good health, and was dressed in clothes of excellent quality.

Baldwin Clears Up Points Over German Matter

(By The Associated Press)

LONDON, July 16—Premier Baldwin in the House of Lords today cleared up two interesting points, namely, that the British note to Germany will be communicated to Washington and that no recent communication over reparations had been exchanged between England and the United States.

The diplomatic talks were resumed in London today, Lord Curzon, secretary of foreign affairs, seeing both the Italian and French ambassadors. The prime minister has a plenitude of advisers in his delicate task of drafting a reply to Germany, the British ambassadors to France, Germany, the United States and Japan being in London at present.

The press teems with suggestions as to what the draft note will contain, but the government maintains the utmost secrecy on this point, and it is exceedingly probable that such secrecy will be continued until the allied powers have had the opportunity of precluding the draft.

The close association of Reginald McKenna with Mr. Baldwin in preparing the draft—the two spent the week-end together at Chequers Court—seems to indicate that a plan aiming at a joint settlement of reparations and inter-allied debts may have an important place in the discussions.

The insistence in Paris dispatches today on the fact that Premier Poincare's speech was prepared before the British prime minister's pronouncement was delivered is regarded here as proving the desire of the French not to embarrass London needlessly in discussions.

HOSTILITY GROWS AGAINST WOOD

By WALTER WILGUS

MANILA, July 16.—The growing hostility of the Filipino political leaders to Governor Leonard Wood, which has been maturing for months, culminated last night in the resignation of Jose P. Laurel, secretary of the interior and a sharp letter from Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate, to Governor Wood wherein the latter was informed that Filipino cooperation would cease unless greater attention was paid to their desires.

The resignation of Mayor Ramon Fernandez of Manila is a possibility, and it is freely predicted that several cabinet ministers in addition to Mr. Laurel will quit.

Mr. Laurel's resignation was due to an order from Governor Wood to reinstate Ray Conley, an American, chief of the secret service who recently was cleared of bribery charges by an investigating committee appointed by the governor. Mr. Laurel, who has consistently opposed the reinstatement of Mr. Conley said late last night that Governor Wood's order left him no other course than to resign. Up to a late hour Governor Wood had not accepted the resignation.

Agitation to call a convention here to draft a constitution for a Philippine republic continues but the more conservative leaders are not willing to take such a step as they fear they might lay themselves open to charges of sedition by the United States

Aguinaldo, the former rebel chieftain who caused the United States so much trouble and who hitherto has not taken part in politics has been active recently visiting numerous provinces, addressing veterans of the revolution and working for solidarity among the Christian and Mohammedan Filipinos.

CHINK OFFICER PROVES A HERO

(By Chicago Tribune Service)

NEW YORK, July 16—Warren Charles, the only policeman in New York of Chinese parentage, has proved himself a hero for the second time. The first time was eighteen years ago, when he braved the "hatchet men" of Chinatown in a police campaign to clean up the district and demonstrated his courage.

His latest exploit was the saving of the lives of two brother policemen who were being dragged down by a drowning longshoreman under Brooklyn Bridge Saturday night. The officers, including Charles, jumped off the pier at Fulton street when they heard John Gillen of Brooklyn, crying for help. As they reached him he threw his arms around two of the policemen, Charles Dorsman and Walter Braun, dragging them under. Patrolman Charles avoided the grip of the fear crazed man and got a raft and a rope from a nearby large.

By this time the two officers in the water were nearly exhausted. Charles threw the rope around the longshoreman's body, released his brother officers and pulled them onto the raft. The longshoreman was taken ashore, but thirty minutes work with a pulmotor failed to revive him.

GOVERNMENT OR INDIVIDUAL—WHICH DEPENDS ON WHICH?

WEEKLY BOOK REVIEW

DEAN REVIEWS.

MR. PODD, by Freeman Tilden (Macmillan.)

By JAMES W. DEAN.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Changes in form of government are entirely dependent on changes in human nature. The body politic cannot advance beyond the state of progress of the individual.

That, in short, is the thesis of "Mr. Pod," Freeman Tilden's new book. The thesis is the only serious aspect of the volume. The author has treated the subject in summer style, like the summer stage revues which entertain without taxing the cerebral mechanism.

The principal figure in the story is Mr. Podd, a millionaire nozzle manufacturer, who charters a boat to take himself and a party of voluntary uplifters around the globe, improving mankind and governments as they go. This circumstance, so closely akin to the famous Ford peace ship expedition, has led many to believe that the author's satire is directed at Henry Ford. This is denied by the publishers.

Mr. Podd's ship is taken by a mutinous crew and the peace pilgrims are dumped on an unfrequented island on the South Atlantic. There they have full opportunity to establish the ideal government. They do not get beyond the talking stage and since each individual has very definite ideas and is unwilling to yield to others in many matters of personal preference, the party is forever in an uproar of dissension.

One of the party is Henry P. Waddick, a grocer of Grape City, Ia. He had gone to The Future, the Podd boat, to tell Podd what a fool he thought he was. Quite unwilling he became a member of the expedition when the boat pulls out before he sees Podd.

He had prepared a long harangue against Podd, but when he met him—"Mr. Waddick's mouth twitched nervously. There were hundreds of furious words waiting to leap from his mouth, but something dammed them up. The fact was, though Mr. Waddick did not know it, he was overtrained. He had crammed too hard, like a college boy going up for exams, and had jammed the exit of his passion."

Anyone who has prepared for weeks to tell the boss how deserving he is of a raise will appreciate Mr. Waddick's predicament.

Another of the party was Mrs. Tantruss, lecturer on child welfare, who was accompanied by her son, Freddie. Others had objected to the boy's behavior. She replied "she would not submit to having her son deprived of his right of expression. Every child had a yearning for self-expression. To curb this natural instinct was to make the child run in grooves, and become mediocre. Great minds were those which constantly overstepped the boundaries."

Freddie broke in by beating a gong. His mother waited with a quiet smile until Freddie shied the beated across the room, hitting Dr. Boger on the forehead and knocking off Miss Peebie's glasses.

"Well, I got enough of this bunk!" cried Freddie in his right to self-expression. "This is nut stuff. Come on, Dostey, let's see you hoof if some more."

Dr. Bodger would save humanity by saving it from poteins.

"You never realize that disease and poverty, and crime and war spring from a common source—auto-taxaemia!" he warned. "First, chronic Then colitis! Then your man runs amuck. It affects the whole nervous system. Do you know, sir, what caused the Napoleonic wars? It was because that great fool, Bonaparte, was a victim of colitis. So was the Kaiser. So were the fools that fought them—and against them, for that matter."

Pansy Peebles was a poetess from Memphis, Tenn. She was an insurgent. The world might be saved if everyone were to become insurgent. Rev. Joe Loasby was of one mind with her in that. He was a Unitarian, but was about to quit that belief because it wasn't insurgent enough. As he said to Miss Peebles, "Life itself is insurgency. Only death is static and conservative. Life bids us fight against the status quo. There is our enemy—we must slay the status quo. Goliath though that enemy be—there are a few of us, are there not, who have the little slings which will rid the liberal path of the giant of stupidity?"

Pete Fink, organizer of the Central Ohio Carpenters' Union, was with the party. Being an organizer, he was not a carpenter. He could do nothing toward erecting shelters on the island on which the party was marooned.

His idea of a Socialist was "a man who has a card and pays his dues. A man who says he 'thinks there's a lot in Socialism' or 'would rather see a socialist in office than some people he knows,' or who 'sympathizes with socialism was not, in Mr. Fink's estimation, a desirable person. To be a socialist, you had to belong. If you didn't belong, you were an enemy. It was the same with syndicalism. Either you were, or you wern't." He had a fervor for organization.

Dostey, referred to above(was a yuongster, whodidn't have all his buttons. His father, had paid a newspaper editor $5 to write the letter which gained the boy passage on The Future.

When Dostey landed on the island he procured all the tobacco and cosmetics in the cargo. Brough back from the jingle he was elected mayor of the colony over Mr. Podd. He exchanged cigars and face powder for votes.

Miss Lucretia Frale was ostracized by other members of the party, especially by Mrs. Tantruss. Mr. Podd had misunderstood her leter of application in which she had spoken of her walk of life. Later it developed that her walk of life was on the west side of Broadway, between 23d and 42d Streets, New York!

She lived in a shelter on the opposite side of the island from others in the party. Hubert Roxthorne, a movie director sailing in the South Atlantic, came upon her her washing lingerie in the surf. He had hunted for an Eve type for years, but no girl had appeared innocent enough until he found Miss Frale. He signed her for the role immediately.

Later he filmed scenes of Dr. Bodger, Rev. Loasby and the others running down the beach with faces of astonishment, unable to believe that the rescue was "the real thing."

All of the pilgrims chered when the United States was sighted, all except Rev. Loasby. It was a matter of principle with him not to cheer for any political unit smaller than the Universe.

Podd's daughter, Willa, married Julius Pickbill, an inconspicuous member of the expedition, after they returned to America. He had won the heiress by the way he cooked doughnuts and the way in which he had performed all the menial tasks of the expedition.

Now the thing that had moved Mr. Podd to start on the expedition was the hope of distributing his book on the International Commonwealth which had failed of sale.

It was Pickbill's idea that people must be made to fit governments, not governments made to fit people. That was beyond Podd's comprehension. The book ends with a dictated statement to the press that Mr. Podd will write another book on communistic commonwealth and thus save the world.

JOHN FARRIS GRANTED WRIT

(By The Associated Press)

RICHMOND, Va., July 16John Farris, plaintiff in a damage suit against the Norfolk and Western Railway company, was granted a writ of error by the Supreme Court of Appeals today after his appeal had once been denied. Farris, suing the railway for injuries alleged to have been incurred while in its employ, was awarded a judgment for $3,000 by a jury in Campbell county circuit court. The trial judge, however, entered an order directing that the plaintiff should accept one-half the award in full settlement of his claim, or submit to a new trial of the case. Farris refused and appealed to the Supreme Court, but his application for a writ of error was denied, on the ground that his appeal was not filed within the six months specified by law. The court acted today under the act passed by the general assembly at its extraordinary session this year, permitting appeals from judgments entered prior to enactment of the six months' limitation statute.

MUNICH SALOONS WRECKED WHEN PRICE OF BEER JUMPS

MUNICH, July 16—The proposed triple increase in the price of beer brought about a storm among the thirsty Turners, who threatened damage to the beer saloons, and in consequence the dealers have delayed the increase until tomorrow at the earliest. Placards announcing the higher price of beer angered the hot and thirsty thousands who are attending the thirteenth annual German gymnastic competitions here. The crowds tore down the price lists and partially wrecked seven rathskellers and the beer houses before the dealers agreed to abandon the increase.

Visitors to the number of nearly 200,000, it is declared, are likely to leave Munich if the increase becomes effective Tuesday. The athletic meeting is expected to continue through to July 21, and it seems doubtful that the saloons will dare attempt to collect higher prices while the city is crowded with strangers. Three hundred Chicago gymnasts are among the visitors.

An effort is being made to advance the price of a litre of Munchener and other famous brands to 5000 marks, which is less than 3 cents in local exchange, but a prohibitive price to persons on mark wages.

HEADLIGHT LAWS NOW ENFORCED

RICHMOND, Va., July 16.—James Hayes, in charge of the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Saturday sent out requests to the police of the counties, cities and towns, urging their cooperation in the enforcement of the new headlight law, which went into effect June 27.

"Automobile owners have had ample time to have the proper headlights placed on their cars," said Mr. Hayes yesterday, "and we will at once begin the enforcement of the law, which is designed to make night-driving safe."

Mr. Hayes said that there had almost unanimous indorsement of the law by those who have complied with, for they find that they can travel with greater safety to themselves and other autoists when glaring headlights are eliminated.

The headlights authorized by the department meet every requirement of the law and the user does not have to dim the lights, as they did with the other kind.

Violation of the law carries a heavy fine.

Files Suit Under Anti-Trust Act

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 16—Suit under the Sherman anti-trust act against the American Chain Company, Inc., was filed late today by United States Attorney Haywood seeking to restrain the company from alleged monopoly and restraint of trade in the manufacture and sale of automobile bumpers.

The government, asserting that the American Chain Company controls at present 60 per cent. of the automobile bumper industry and that it will control 100 per cent. if it wins certain patent litigations pending, seeks to restrain the company from endeavoring to fix wholesale prices to yield a minimum profit of not less than 10 per cent. for itself and the manufacturers.

Moreover, the government alleges that the company with offices and place of business in Bridgeport, Conn., has been assisted in the conspiracy to restrain trade by the Gemco Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee; L. P. Holliday Company, Decatur, Ills.; Biflex Products Company, Waukegan, Ill.; Allith Prouty Company, Danville, Ill.; Wolverine Bumper and Specialty Company, Grand Rapids, Mich.; New Era Spring and Specialty Company, Grand Rapids; American Metal Parts Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee; Bellevue Manufacturing Company, Bellevue, O.; C. G. Spring Company, Kalamazoo, Mich., and Bilt-rite Products Company, Danville, Ohio.

SIDELIGHTS ON SMALL FIGHTERS

By HARRY NEWMAN.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Now for a whirl with the smaller boys. There is a flock of flights on hand and fans will relish the change from the ponderous guys to the fast stepping youngsters. Tuesday night at the Queensboro Athletic Club, Johnny Buff, the old flyweight and bantam champion, will attempt a comeback. John has drawn Henry Calena, as his opponent for ten rounds.

On Wednesday night at the New York Velodrome, Charlie White and Richie Mitchell will settle it in a fifteen round journey.

Frankly Genaro, American flyweight champion, will get a brand new start on Thursday night, at the East New York Oval, where he will tie up with Al Triano for fifteen rounds.

Mike McTigue, the light heavyweight champion was to have a twelve round fuss with Tommy Loughran at Harrison Field on Thursday night, but it has been set back until August 2.

While there is considerable speculation as to whether Benny Leonard will be abie to make 135 pounds for his row with Lew Tendler at Yankee Stadium on July 23, Billy Gibson, manager of the champion, says that Benny will get down to that poundage

Johnny Dundee who will tackle Eugene Criqui at the Polo Grounds on July 26, for the featherweight championship, won't have to spot Criqui any weight. Both men will make 128 pounds.

More than likely they will clinch that proposed match between Jack Dempsey and Luis Firpo Monday afternoon. Jack Kearns will probably haul off with pen in hand and drop the necessary John Hancock on the dotted line. Firpo will do likewise and the bout will no doubt be held some time next September at Boyle's Thirty Acres. If Willis is to be Dempsey's opponent the match will be held at the Yankee Stadium. The politicians have so decreed and that about settles it.

FATHER SHOOTS SLAYER OF SON

(By Chicago Tribune Service.)

CHICAGO, July 16.— A year ago, as Daniel Gallela and his ten children sat on the stoop of their home, trying to avoid the heat, Michael, aged six, ran into the street to play with some other children. An auto truck, driven by Louis Paperone careened through the street at a high rate of speed and little Michael was crushed to death.

Paperone was arrested on a manslaughter charge, but the inquest jury, as is usual in such cases, acquitted him and said the child was to blame. Gallela brooded over the injustice of the thing and went to see Paperone. The latter sneered at him and remarked that Gallela had "nine kids left" so he had no grounds for complaint.

In a second meeting Paperone beat the grieving father badly and threatened to kill him if he ever came "bothering him about the kid again."

Gallela was sitting on his porch again Sunday night with his nine remaining children. It had been just a year to a day and the hour when the truck had crushed out the life of his boy. Two men came along the street carrying a tub of ice cream. One was Paperone. The sight of him drove Gallela to fury and he dashed into the house and came out with a shotgun.

"You kill my little Mike; you try kill me," he screamed, as he fired at Paperone. The bullets entered one of his lungs and at the hospital it was said he would die. The vengeful father was hustled to a police station and the surviving children and their mother huddled in the darkened home.

FIRE IN NORTHERN TOWN GOTTEN UNDER CONTROL

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C., July 16.—Wireless messages picked up tonight from Anyox, a smelting town in the Northern part of the Province, declared a fire which was sweeping the town this afternoon had been put under control.

A wireless message from the Steamship Griffin, in the Portland canal, picked up this afternoon stated the town was on fire, and that the vessel had heard several sounds resembling explosions.

I'D KILL POISON PEN, SAYS DOCTOR WHO GOT 32 ANONYMOUS NOTES

CHICAGO.—[Special.] — Thirty-two anonymous letters in two years are enough; they must stop, according to Dr. Burton W. Mack, a Chicago physician.

Dr. Burton W. Mack.

"If I got hold of the sneak who has been trying to break up my home and has been threatening my wife, my child and myself, I would wring his neck with these two hands."

Clenching two powerful fists as if to crush the unknown enemy who has made life miserable for him and his family, Dr. Mack has sworn vengeance against his mysterious foe.

Since Oct. 31, 1921, Dr. Mack has received thirty-two letters from this hidden enemy, he told State's Attorney Crowe. Eighteen of these are in the hands of federal officials, who have tried, without success, to trace the ambushed author. Scores of malicious telephone messages have furnished no satisfactory clew to the identity of his persecutor.

Some years ago Dr. Mack was divorced from his wife, Dr. Mary K. Mack. Later he remarried. From his second marriage he has a daughter a year old and a baby born recently. The physician, however, disclaimed the theory that his first wife might have been back of the "poison pen" letters.

Dr. Mack produced a pair of Christmas cards, bearing the holiday greeting, "God's curses on you and yours. To You from Me." The messages grew in viciousness as the months went by and culminated in violence. One night when Mrs. Mack was alone with her baby the hidden persecutor hurled a brick through a window near which she was sitting. Not a trace has ever been gained of the unknown.

ALTAVISTA, July 16 —Recently Prohibition Inspector E. W. Smith, Constable Matthew Norton and Deputies Bailey and Trent raided the Haslap premises near Altavista, in Campbell county, and captured a 67-gallon copper kettle, cap and worm, and poured out 700 gallons of mash. Two men were arrested and taken to the Altavista jail, two others present made their escape.

On starting to town with their prisoners the officers found the road blocked in three places, trees being cut down across the road and in one place the bridge was torn up and hauled off in a wagon.

WOODS and WATERS

BY BOB BECKER

WHEN camping out, a fellow is apt to use the frying pan too much, in that fried meats or fried fish become tiresome on the bill of fare. We are keen for broiled meats or fish by way of variety, and it isn't much of a trick to turn out a tempting dish by means of a small broiler and a bed of coals.

Get yourself a small broiling iron.

First grease the iron, so the fish won't stick. Fat bacon will turn the trick. With a rather large fish, clean it, cut off the head and split it down the back instead of the belly. Then lay it on the broiler and put strips of bacon (or pork will do) across. Now you are ready for the job.

If you can locate any hickory sticks for this fire, by all means use them. You want a moderate bed of coals so that the outside won't get too well done while the inside is not cooked at all. When done sprinkle with salt and pepper, spread some butter over the fish and it is ready to eat.

We usually have broiled small fish in the woods, reserving the big ones for baking or frying. When done the bacon on the fish is crisp brown and the fish itself has a good color, too, due to the grease from the former. And do they taste good? Man, O man!

After th[e] ninth [illegible] a hard game to [illegible] have been [illegible] twirler, [illegible] March here, [illegible] for the Light [illegible] remained on the [illegible].

The twirler, Hunter, a former Davidson College [illegible] was rated adrift by the Twins after a fling at organized ball there. Perhaps he didn't have anything on the ball, and perhaps he did, but a boy [illegible] the first one yesterday should earn him a corner in the Pullman after a trial [illegible] as often as any other Fountain Maker.

Murphy went to the plate twice in that thrilling ninth, and last night he gave the boys a feed—he didn't get a hit.

Kane and Irby were prominent among those who collected the 12 hits off Twombly and Wilson. One of Irby's two brought him back to the starting point and another kid managed to see the game, while Kane reached the midway bag on three occasions. The chief concern about "Red" Irby is that he not only hits but manages to be near the end of every drive smashed out in the neighborhood of the center garden. His habit of being where practically all of them fall seems to be more than pure luck—he has most of the hitters in the Brahham loop figured out.

The Durham-Raleigh five-inning lock yesterday no doubt established a world's record. In the five frames the Bulls failed to secure a semblance of a hit off three Raleigh hurlers but chalked up four runs. Frequently runs are scored in a no-hit affair, that is not th record, but who ever heard of three twirlers working out no-hit honors in one game. Joel was relieved by Manage Duncan in the fifth, and Duke after giving out one free pass ambled back to the left garden with Dudley finishing the contest. It certainly was a unique comeoff. Duke has been intermingling twirling ability with his Capitals for sometime using everybody on the mound from the bat boy to himself, but that he would establish what appears to be a record probably never occurred to him.

The Cleveland Indians are at present giving the Yanks the stiffest opposition they have encountered during the season. In the double bill yesterday, Speaker's tribe secured 26 safe clouts or one more than New York, and New York seldom fails to out hit any club they encounter in a two-way affair.

There appears to be a slight hitch in the steady driving power of the Giants. Pittsburgh managed to show up well in the late series and now the Cubs are giving them nip and tuck competition.

Rogers, the Durham pitcher-outfielder, who has been under suspension for thirty days has been sold to the Rochester club of the International league. Rogers, who left Danville last season in trade for Caviness, will be farmed out to Scranton.

Bobby Jones, the Southern boy, who Sunday realized a life's ambition

If They Start the Games Later!

by taking the national tennis championship as now the center of the sporting world. The writers cover every move he makes, but Fullerton, Chicago Tribune scribe, is leading them all with his story of the final play, in which he intermingles Southern tradition with the victory of the Dixie lad for one of the best sport stories ever written.

Now comes the report that the Dempsey-Firpo battle will likely be staged by Tex Rickard in Buenos Aires—the Paris of South America. If the plans are fulfilled and the encounter goes southward many ringside followers will be sorely disappointed as they expected to witness what promised to be the fight of fights while it lasted. In their disappointment the nearness of home and tender care for what is left of the Bull of Pampas shouldn't be overlooked by the fans, as they are Americans and supposed to be a humane people. One can't blame Luis, he could of course linger around in some thundersterm down home and get knocked cold, but the mazuma he will get from his visit to dreamland by the American thunderbolt wouldn't be there. Regardless of the desires of the fighters themselves Rickard, Barnum's successor as the world's greatest showman, will as usual arrange things according to his own taste and the abundance of coin, and this time Jack Kearns will likely agree. For Jack was recently a "wild" Westerner.

The Virginian diamond performers worked extra hours for the management last night, but it was at Herb's expense. Murphy will have to take the second half now so as to get back near to fifty-fifty on that feed off the post-season series. What there is to the olden tradition of chicken and "fou's" will come out today, for the boys are reported to have made several squeeze plays on their gnal trip to the plate. All in all everyone enjoyed the evening and the boys now say Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are as good a host and hostess as they are boss and bossess, and any player to ever work under the Danville pilot can testify to that.

OUR SECRET AMBITION

Dempsey-Firpo Match In Home Of Argentinian

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 16.—The heavy weight boxing outlook took an unexpected turn today when Promoter Tex Rickard announced a definite proposal to stage a title match between Jack Dempsey, the champion, and Luis Angleo Firpo a native Argentinelon in the capital of the latter, Buenes Aires about November.

Firpo, keerly anxious to fight for highest of fistic honors, before his countrymen, already has accepted Rickard's terms. Jack Kearns, the title holder's manager, discussed details of the proposition with Rickard for an hour this afternoon and at the end of the conference told the promoter his answer would be ready by Wednesday.

Rickard said his plan to take the fight out of this country was prompted by two reasons—Firpo's desire to return to his native country for the bout and enthusiastic reports from the promoter's agents as to the possibilities of financial success in the Paris of South America.

Rickard has had representatives in the Argentine for some time looking over the ground, but just after Firpo's knockort victory over Jess Willard at Boyle's thirty acres a few days ago, he intimated that he had abondoned the project in South America because of the probable risk involved. However he received cable advices today that helped alter his mind, one of them from Juan Homs, personal agent, saying that a fight between Firpo and either Dempsey or Harry Wills, negro contender, would draw more than two millon pesos—about $500,000 n the Argentine capital.

The exact nature of his offer to Kearns was not revealed but it was that it embraced a percentage proposition that would assure the champion and his manager close to $500,000.

Kearns meanwhile declared that although he would give Rickard's offer every consideration. He was desirous of arranging, if possible, two matches for the champion in this country this year instead of going to South America. Kearns said he would prefer to have Dempsey meet Firpo first, around Labor Day, and then if victorious take on Wills. Just before the World Series in October.

Rickard has Firpo bound to an iron-clad contract, however. He is not especially interested in promoting a Wills-Dempsey or Wills-Firpo match. He believes the logical bout is between the titleholder and the swarthy Argentine. Kearns has also had an offer from Jimmy Johnson, matchmaker, for the Yankees stadium for a Wills-Dempsey contest around Labor Day, but the champion's manager has not acted upon it. Tom O'Rouke Polo Grounds matchmaker, also is ready to bid for the title fight but has made no definite overtures as yet.

"We're ready to fight," Kearns said, summing up his views. "We want two matches this year, one with Firpo and another with Wills. I am anxious to have them in that order. I'm willing to sign for both with one or with separate promoters. For our share, I'll want fifty per cent. of the gate."

TENNIS PLAYERS ARE REDUCED

(By The Associated Press)

BOSTON, July 16.—The field of eighty lawn tennis players here for thirty-first annual renewal of the historic Longwood Bowl singles championship was reduced to 33 in the play today. With one exception, the match scheduled between R. Norris Williams, 2nd, Bryan Mawr, Penna, and W. W. Ingram of Harvard, all the first and second round matches were disposed of. Williams will arrive here tomorrow. Zenzo Shimizu, the Japanese Davis Cup team champion dropped out of the singles competition today by defaulting in order that he may concentrate on doubles practice, while Masanesuke Fukuda champion of Japan, won by default. The other Japanese player here, Sei Chiro, Kashio, defeated Robert Bray by a score of 6-0 7-5 and thus atoned forhis defeat at the hands of Bray in recent Church cup series in New York.

Hill's majority, according to incomplete newspaper reports, will reach approximately 1,500.

Manager Murphy Host To Players

Members of the Danville baseball team of the Piedmont league were entertained at a buffet supper by Owner-Manager Herb Murphy and Mrs. Murphy at their residence on Paxton street last evening at 8 o'clock. In addition to the players, the wives of several were present, as were several young ladies, friends of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy. The host and hostess were assisted by Mrs. Leo Harris and Mrs. R. F. Trexler and by other ladies in serving the viands.

The table was spread in the coolness under the stars, just in the rear of the home, and presented an abundant and excellently prepared menu of which fried chicken, country style was the piece de resistance and the players "made a hit" every time it came over "the plate." Not a single one struck out on chicken. But the "fowls," all of which came from Georgia, the real home of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, were caught by all the players, instead of giving Catchers Cochlin and Kearney all this pleasant work. Manager Murphy gave no passes, and everybody had to hit that chicken. Eddie Regan sidled up to the end of the table where a bevy of young ladies was grouped and significantly remarked on how he liked "chickens," but this did not avail him anything. He happens to be a bachelor.

Freddie Dorman was chaperoned by his father, and several people drew a grin from "Dutch" when they asked if the elder Dorman were his brother.

Among the guests were little Miss Jane Murphy, little Miss Trexler and Master "Cud-e" Harris, Jr.

Besides that fried chicken—platters and dishes of it—an excellent potato salad, and mixed pickles, iced tea with a dash of lemon, biscuit and other viands made up the menu, with chocolate and cocoanut layer cakes as dessert. While many of those present made hits, no one seemed inclined to make a "home run." The whole party relaxed into a cordiality and pleasantry that made the gathering more enjoyable to all.

Among those present besides the host and hostess and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Harris, Mrs. Trexler and the other ladies were the following: Messrs. "Cy" Twombly, Braxton Gibson, Leo Harris, "Lefty" Wilson, Gray, Cochlin, Louis Kearney, George Resco, H. A. (Danny) Overton, Fred Dorman, R. Floyd Trexler, J. E. Regan, Jr., Ted Smith, Quinn, H. G. Lea, and A. H. Taylor.

The entertainment was a thoroughly enjoyable one to all present.

Johnson Again Undisputed Czar of American League

HARRY FRAZEE

CHICAGO.—[Special.] — Once more Ban Johnson is the recognized "czar" of the American Baseball League of Baseball Clubs. Only Charles Comiskey, the "Old Roman," remains in the organization to oppose the retund leader. He will ever and always be aligned against the czar. Their feud has continued too long for either to offer or accept the olive branch. What caused them to [illegible] become such bitter enemies has been lost in the haze of antiquity—perhaps even they have forgotten the cause of their differences—but that they will continue foes to the day of their passing is undoubted.

Johnson's ascendancy to his old power came with the elimination of Harry Frazee by his sale of the Boston Red Sox. Now the only club opposed to him is Chicago, sole survivor of the "Rebel Three," that by lining up with the National league virtually forced the junking of the old national commission and the installation of K. M. Landis as supreme arbiter.

The third member of the anti-Johnson forces passed when Til Huston sold his interests in the New York Yankees to Col. Jake Ruppert. Huston, war on Johnson started when the latter made an attempt to discipline Pitcher Carl Mays for an apparent attempt to jump the Red Sox and force his sale to the Yankees. The matter finally found its way into the baseball court, with the Boston and Chicago clubs siding with New York.

Johnson and Frazee were at sword points from the day the theatrical magnate broke into baseball. He purchased the club from Joe Lannin without the consent of the league president, and from that time openly opposed Johnson, at the same time working hand in hand with the Yankees, with the result that New York finally achieved an American league pennant.

During Frazee's régime, Boston slipped from one of the best baseball cities in the circuit to the worst.

Hunter Deserved a No-Hit Contest

Although defeated yesterday by High Point 6 to 4, Danville's ninth inning rally was a thriller and worth several prices of admission. Hunter, who pitched 8 and one-third innings for the visitors, deserved a no-hit game—and almost got himself in the record, but a badly played grounder off Overton's bat in the sixth, which went through Schmidt and Resco's pop fly in the ninth, which either McCulloch or Irby could have gotten with ease, count against him.

The ninth inning was the big event of the game and in that frame the locals almost crowded across enough runs to tie. As it was four runs were forced across the platter, when four walks and two hit batsmen, coupled with Resco's fluke hit, came as gifts to the Murphyites. The last half of the ninth runs something as follows:

Murphy led off and hit weakly to McCulloch at second who threw him out at first. Regan then waited out the wild and fast weakening Hunter, and walked. Resco hit weakly over second and either McCulloch or Irby should have had the pop-up, but they more or less gracefully did the Alphonse-Gaston stunt and Resco was safe. Gibson was sent in to bat for Cochlin and was purposely walked, filling the bases. Kearney was sent in for Wilson and was hit by a pitched ball, Regan scoring on the force-in. Dorman was also hit by a pitched ball and Resco scored. At this point Manager Herndon waived Hunter to the bench, sending Purcell to the mound. Harris was sent in to bat for Overton and he hit to pitcher, forcing Gibson at the plate. Smith then waited for four wide ones as did Trexler, Kearney and Dorman being forced in. The mighty Murphy now came to the bat for the second time in the inning. When the count was two balls and one strike he swung heftily and lifted the ball high and far. Thrasher was backed up against left field fence, but he got the ball and one of the most heart-rending innings ever witnessed in this city was over.

The visitors started off by scoring two runs in the first inning. Twombly was on the mound, and he showed from the beginning that Monday was not his day to pitch. The first thing he did was to hit Irby. McCulloch then flew out to Resco, but Kane hit one against the fence for a two-bagger. Irby going to third. Thrasher flew out to Smith and the fly was caught so close in that Irby made no attempt to come home, but when Smith threw home as a safeguard and Cochlin let the ball get through him, Irby scored. Kane going to third. Kane scored on Tolbert's single.

In the fourth, three runs were counted by the High Pointers. After two men were out Schmidt singled and Meekin lifted the ball over the fence. Thompson was then walked and Hunter doubled. Irby's single brought in Thompson.

In the fifth after Kane had doubled for the second time Murphy yanked Twombly, Lefty Wilson going in. The next three men were retired and none scored.

The last counter of the visitors came in the ninth when Irby hit one over the fence.

Looks Like Firpo Will Be Next to Fuss With Dempsey

JESS WILLARD.

LUIS FIRPO.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Well, it looks as though they have finally found a white man who can stand up with Jack Dempsey. We refer, of course, to Luis Angel Firpo, the mighty kid from the Argentine, who plastered the veteran Jess Willard into submission in eight furious rounds at Boyle's Thirty Acres in New Jersey. Right off the bat you must compare the South American thumper with our own Jim Jeffries when the latter started on a career which finally landed him on the top rung of the heavyweight class. A real champion was Jeff, and this bird Firpo promises to be just as spectacular as the old boilermaker.

You've always got to hand it to the guy with the sock, and Firpo carries that sweet asset. Not long on the defensive, he scarcely needs much of it. When the Argentine child starts shooting those arms around in millwind fashion it takes a mighty clever boxer to hold him off.

It will be remembered that Jeffries had nothing to recommend him to the fans when he set out but a wallop, but that smack landed him a champion of champions. It is the same way with Firpo. Just a socker, that is all. In his fuss with Bill Brennan he never felt any of Bill's hardest swings. It was the same with old Jess, although the former champion had him worried for a time.

During the fuss with Willard it will be remembered that old Firpo took many a sharp jolt to the whiskers. Several times Jess rocked the big South American with bangs to the head, but they only served to send Firpo in with renewed fury, and when he went tearing in there was nothing to it.

Funny thing about Firpo. He got away to a poor start in his boxing career. His first shot at the old game of hit and try to get away was most disastrous for Luis. It was in an amateur tournament in Buenos Aires in January, 1917, and when our hero squared off in an awkward fashion at his opponent the latter leaned one on his mug and Firpo left the game.

However, Luis was made of stern stuff and never quit. He stuck it out with the Simon-pures for some time and nearly killed everything they had in South America. Then came his first professional fight. That was in Chile in September, 1919, and Firpo knocked over some egg by the name of Daly in seven rounds. Daly, it is alleged, was an American, but evidently not a good one. Americans as a rule don't go so fast, against newcomers at least.

Cleans Up Latin Field.

After that Luis got to banging around the various South American countries and didn't pull up until he had cleaned up the entire field.

When Firpo was asked about his future plans, the giant Argentinian lad with a shrug of the shoulders advised that he would stay here in America and fight any man that Tex Rickard might select for him.

Player on reaching his ball finds that it is imbedded in some soft mud. This condition of the turf was due to a hard rain that had just fallen on a section of the fairway that was under repair. It is impossible to play the ball as it lies. What is the proper procedure?

A ball imbedded in soft mud, except in a recognized water hazard, shall be deemed to be in casual water. A player has the right to remove it from the mud and drop it without any penalty.

For how long a time was the stymie abolished and when was it returned to the code that covers golf play?

The stymie was abolished for a year by the United States Golf Association. Evidently the change did not meet with the general approval of golfers at large, as it was restored in April, 1922, and stymies must now be played.

JONES REALIZES LIFE AMBITION

(By Chicago Tribune Service)
BY HUGH FULLERTON

IMWOOD, L. I., July 16.— Bobby Jones is open champion golfer of America. Late Saturday coming to the eighteenth hole, all square with Bobby Cruickshank, the dour little Scot pro after one of the most desperate and grilling matches ever played, Jones achieved his life ambition, broke the seemingly interminable run of hard luck, and while his gallant foe fought to the finish, dropped a short putt and won.

An instant later engulfed in the rush of 10,000 of the most frantic and unruly fans that ever witnessed a golf match he was lifted on the shoulders of the milling mob and borne in triumph to the club house. As that last putt sank, the rebel yell arose and the remnants of Jeb Stuart's cavalry, led by Tom Paine and O. B. Keller, swept to the rescue.

Jones' triumph was perhaps the most popular ever accomplished. It was the fourth time that Jones has been within striking distance of the open championship and it came in a dramatic finish which eclipsed that of Saturday, when Cruickshank tied him and seemingly snatched his long delayed honors from him.

On the same hole where Saturday he collapsed, and, where an hour later Cruickshank made his historic approach shot, Jones turned the tables, and made a shot which almost duplicated that of Cruickshank Saturday.

They had battled each other almost to exhaustion, while an impolite, unruly and resistless mob swarmed after them, ran over them, violated every rule of golf etiquette and perhaps damaged their game. They had gone out over the first nine holes in 37 strokes each. Cruickshank almost breaking Jones' heart by shooting three birdies and putting with deadly accuracy sixteen putts for the nine holes and five of them long. Jones had retaliated with one birdie.

The strain, the work of fighting through rushing mobs of men and women, the shouting and bickering of the ungolf like gallery, affected both. During the second round, and after Jones had gained two strokes, he went off in his work and lost the advantage, to regain it at the sixteenth and lose it back on the seventeenth, where Cruickshank, by a series of three remarkable shots sank a four and squared the match.

The two diminutive athletes, tired, weakening under the excitement and terrific heat of the muggy day, stood on the hill, looking down the long narrow fairway to the square of green and the flag 425 yards away. Around that square was packed a small army of watchers. Spread along the fairway was two lines of rushing, moving men and women.

Cruickshank shot. His drive half topped, curved off to the left, went into the rough half behind 2 big trees. Jones' drive was two feet off the fairway in short rough to the right. Cruickshank made a brilliant effort but his shot was still seventy yards short of the pond guarding the green.

While the crowd held its breath, Jones studied the lie of the ball, picked a midiron and swinging, as if in practice, lifted the ball high and true over the pond and laid it eight feet from the cup.

The shot won the match. He could have tried for a three had it been necessary but when Cruickshank pitched over the pond and off to the side into a trap, there was no need. Desperately the game little Scotchman tried to hole out from the trap far over the cup and after missing the long putt he ran to congratulate Jones before Bobby with two careful putts dropped the ball into the hole and finally became champion.

The play of the tie was more sensational if possible than yesterday's dramatic finish. Jones outdrove his little foeman constantly and it was his long hitting from the tee which gave him the victory as he was outapproached and outputted on fourteen holes.

The day was extremely close and threatening rain but late in the round a tricky and shifting wind gave trouble without much relieving the sufferers.

But it was not the wind that affected Cruickshank's game as much as the interference with his work by men who were supposed to guard. Just at the close of the first round an official presiding over the match walked out on the green and proceeded to read rules to Cruickshank, warning him against moving worm casts on the greens with his putter and explaining that he must use a forward and back movement, or perhaps a vacuum cleaner and not brush the obstruction away with his putter swinging sideways.

The incident seemed to disturb the little Scotchman and his work went ragged for several rounds. His friends were indignant, claiming that the official should have penalized him or kept silent, and that he had no right to talk with the players under such a strain.

Cruickshank, however, refused to alibi or to complain, saying that Jones is a greater golfer and one of the best in the world.

Fight Of Bobby Jones Long One; Is Always Game

By LAWRENCE PERRY.
(Copyright, 1923, by The Bee)

NEW YORK, July 16.—Bobby Jones will now set himself for the amateur golf title and those who followed his play at Inwood are about as completely convinced as persons can be concerning anything so inexact as golfing form, that he will add honor to his season's collection.

The success of the young Atlantan on the Unattractive Long Island links last week could serve as a point for any moral lesson and adorn a sermon, with practical illustration. Here is a youth who for several years has stood at the fore front of American golf and yet, due to various causes has just failed to grasp the prize. At Brookline in the amateur last year when Jess Sweetzer sailed into port a victory after uncanny golf and Jones saw another opportunity gone his mood was that of a youngster who believes that the gods who direct the destinies of athletes held him without favor. He seemed utterly discouraged.

Yet he wasn't it now appears that he was steeled to return to the conflict and to pit his science, his courage, his will-power against all the adverse influence that in the past has militated against his success. Now the open championship is his, the most signal honor that an American golfer can win in this country. And won under conditions that were pitiless in their sharp necessity. Jones had to play golf to beat this dour little Scot Cruikshank of Smakamaxon. All the qualities of nerve and sporting spirit and intrepidity that are among the constituent elements of a great athlete's personality were demanded in this dramatic issue and the manner in which the southerner met the test adequately demonstrated his measure as a man and as a sportsman.

One forgot the low mystr meadow lands, the weedy flats where Jamaica Bay should be when the tide is high, the lowering skies, the mosquitoes and so forth in the absorbing character of this great battle of the links. Both rivals made their mistakes. It would not have been as thrilling a match as it was had not human frailties have played a part in the contest. Had there been no errors the mechanical element would have been so greatly emphasized as to make the match seem less of a contest between two persons than a game played by automatons.

Yes, troubles, appeared sequentially for both players and no small part of thrills of the afternoon pere provided by the splendidly skillful manner in which their ultimate effects were circumvened. The strain, of course was tremendous and neither of the men would have been flesh and blood had they not occasionally yielded to it. But breaks, mishaps and the like are as much a part of any competitive sport as the normal trend of events therein and most certainly they tended to aid greatly to the emotions of the ten thousand—think of that, ten thousand—spectators who braved the threatening rain and followed the two stars over the links.

Yet in the end it was Jones who triumphed most signally over besetting adversities, who at the crucial moment seized fate by the whiskers and drew him finally—so far as this match was concerned—out of his path. Nothing, of course, could have been more dramatic than the appearance of the rivals at the eighteenth tee all even—each with a card showing 72 strokes, which, by the way, is the par for the eighteen holes of this course.

And the dramatic intensity of the situation was enhanced when Cruikshank, who had the honor on this hole, topped his ball, sending it only 150 yards, and Jones' ball described a beautiful out curve, finally bringing gup in the rough on the right of the fair way.

Bad luck for both, but it would be unfair to Cruikshank not to make it clear that whereas Jones, albeit in the rough, had a very fair lie, the little Scot not only had no chance of getting on the green with his second shot, but had to play out hrotugh the trees to the fairway and strike for the pin with his third shot. The match was won and lost right here. Both men played their final shots for the green up to the highest possibilities but Cruikshank had farther to go and that was the answer.

REASON IS DENIED.

(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, July 16.—John Conway Toole, president of the International league tonight denied he had dismissed Umpire Phyle because of a changed decision.

"The league had more umpires than we needed," Mr. Toole said, "and some one had to be dismissed. In my opinion Phyle was the man whose services could most easily be dispensed with, so he was the man to go. The dismissal has nothing to do with any decision of his in the Baltimore-Rochester series".

Queer Contest At Durham Ends In a Tied Score

DURHAM, July 16.— Three Raleigh twirlers pitched against Durham this afternoon and none of them allowed a hit, yet the Bulls scored four runs in their half of the fifth saving the game by tieing the score, and establishing a record in baseball, so far as known. The Durham club did not get a semblence of a hit, although three men worked in the box. Although cut brief by rain, which came after five innings, the game was one of the most unique ever staged in the Piedmont wheel. The contest, a five inning affair was called at the end of the fifth on account of rain. Raleigh had scored four runs—two in the second inning and two in the third and aparently had the game won when the fifth started. The locals could not touch the benders of the pitchers who worked and the contest seemed lost.

However, in the fifth queer things began to hapen. Six walks and a hit batsman netted four runs, tieing the count and saving the game so far as being lost was concerned although this did not give the locals a win. It happened like this. Sadler popped up. Heine, Stringfield, Butts and Gooch were walked in succession, forcing in Heine. Dayton next up was hit by Riel forcing in Stringfield. Riel was then yanked and Manager Duncan came in from left field. He walked Vigurest forcing in Butts and then went back to left vacating to Dudley. McMillan whiffed. Dudley was also wild and walked Benson forcing in Gooch for the tieing run, making the fourth —with nothing like a hit yet off any of the batsmen.

Raleigh scored two in the second. Carr Smith first up hit for the circuit. Graves walked went to second on Jones single and scored on Siner's two bagger. Two more were added in the third. Duncan was safe on an error and scored on Waldrop's triple, who also counted a moment later on Smith's single. The box score will give further details of the peculiar game:

SIEGEL KNOCKED OUT

(By The Associated Press)

NEWARK, July 16. — Mickey Walker, welterweight champion of the world, knocked out Nate Siegel, of Boston, in the tenth round of a scheduled 12 round bout here tonight. Siegel was on the defensive throughout. Walker weighed 146 pounds and Siegel 150.

Ruth Keeps Yanks in Race in Belief of Connie Mack

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—[Special]—"Babe Ruth is responsible for the Yankees being out where they are. He is what makes the New York club a little better than the rest of the teams in the American league. Without him they would be down fighting for a chance to keep up with the crowd."

So declares Connie Mack.

CONNIE MACK

"The Yankees have some good pitching, considerably above the average, and they have Ruth. I want to tell you that those two are very vital factors. Without them the Yanks would be up against it. I want to repeat on this Babe Ruth talk. I think that he today is the most dangerous batter in the American league, bar none.

Makes Him Laugh.

"He is very smart up there at the plate. It makes me laugh to hear people talk about the way he will go after bad balls and look weak against slow balls. I want to tell you that the only way to get rid of the Ruth menace in a game where runs mean anything is to give him a base on balls. Put the ball over the plate to him and he will break up your game.

"We lost four straight games to the Yanks, but we played fine ball against the New Yorkers.

"There were three of those games where a dash of hitting in the pinches would have turned the tables in our favor. Of course, we did not have that hitting, because, as I said, the Yank pitching was just a little too good.

Naylor Is Best Bet.

"When Naylor was injured it seemed that we went into a slump. We ought not to have slumped, but we did. He was our best, or rather our leading pitcher. Then Heimach had a bad back and Ogden got a sore arm and Bing Miller and then Hauser were injured.

"But I am not complaining. We have a real team. It is a little young and likely to take itself too seriously and get too tight, but it will come along all right."

The Unit Of Advertising Value Is Circulation

¶But mere NUMBER of printed copies means nothing unless they are actually DELIVERED and READ.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ON STRIKE AGAINST SHOWMAN'S ARREST

KANE Pa, July 16—Because of the action of the Ministerial Association in causing the arrest of George L. Dobyn, owner of a carnival now exhibiting here, on a charge of operating gambling devices, the volunteer fire department is on strike and formal announcement has been made that no more alarms will be answered until the charge against Dobyn has been withdrawn. The carnival is appearing for the benefit of the firemen.

The announcement of the strike came as the climax of a demonstration on Frayley street, following the action of Justice Bunce in holding Dobyn under $2 000 bail The fire alarm was repeatedly rung from a Frayley street box until the street was packed with curious persons A fire truck was driven along the street and Carl Carlson, president of the department, made an announcement from the running-board that the firemen would answer no more alarms His remarks were cheered by the crowd. Fire Chief John Valentuer has made the same announcement through a newspaper statement.

Rev. F. M. Hall, Rev O T Anderson and Rev J A McCamey caused Dobyn's arrest for running the usual games found at a street carnival The ministers refuse to make any effort to have the charges withdrawn and the firemen declare their ultimatum is to be strictly observed late in the game, Chicago finally winning 9 to 6

When Rowland dropped into Comiskey's office after the game he was taken to task for using Benz. The Sox manager pointed out that he was forced to use him because of the crippled condition of his pitching staff To which Comiskey is said to have replied.

"That all may be true, but Benz is no Friday pitcher Never use him with Saturday and Sunday crowds to be considered. Benz is a Monday pitcher."

From that time on Joe Benz was called the "wash day pitcher" by his teammates

DANCER WINS A POINT

NYACK, N. Y., July 16.—Evan Burrowes Fontaine, dancer, and her mother have won a point in their attempt to quash a second indictment charging them with perjury in connection with Miss Fontaine's $1,000,000 breach of promise suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Supreme Court Justice Seeger yesterday granted a motion of Edward J. Collins, attorney for Miss Fontaine and her mother, which will permit him to inspect the minutes of the grand jury which returned the second indictment.

MISSOURI HAS FOUND HER IDEAL IN THE CANINE WORLD

"SILOAM," AWARDED PRIZE AS MISSOURI'S CHAMPION HOUN' DAWG. YOU BETTER NOT KICK HIM AROUN'.

(Special to The Bee.)

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo., July 17.—Missourian hounds, particularly from Clay county, feel they are being unrighteously kicked aroun'.

And by all that's peculiar to a houn' dawg it's got to stop, they vow. This city is in Clay county. Houn' dawgs abound around the old familiar pound, but nary a one is caught.

They always got the freedom of the place, so familiar a sight were they.

Then the city council voted a tax of $10 on each individual houn'. Tax on flivvers is $3.50. And while the hounds felt decidedly complimented by the special attention, they decided they weren't from the "show me" state for nothing.

Their owners called a mass meeting, and a protest parade of hounds was held through the streets. The dawgs didn't wear licenses, indefiance of the new law.

Hundreds lined the streets, expecting something. But nothing transpired, excepting a show at the end. Purses were raised for the best "houn' dawg." And "Siloam" was chosen as the most typical houn' dog in the state.

City officials employed a special dog catcher before the parade. But no dawgs were arrested, and the hounds are enjoying special liberties. Judge John H. Morrison, justice of the peace, is backing the dogs, and has formed a Missouri Hound Dog Society. Each year now houn' shows will be held.

NIGHT AIR MAIL SERVICE PLAN

CHICAGO, Ills, July 16.—Night air mail service between New York and San Francisco will be realized by August 1, according to first assistant Postmaster General Bartlett here today to attend a state convention of postal officials.

That transcontinental all-air mail routes with a night flying program, made possible by the developments, in lighting and other features of night aviation, would soon be in effect was seen in the department's order for five million special air mail stamps. Mr. Bartlett said the stamps will go into the hands of the engravers within a few days and the first may be issued by August 1.

The stamps will be in three denominations coast experts are now working out the exact amounts to be charged for the service. The lowest denomination of stamps will be between ten and 12 cents, the second denomination between 14 and 18 cents and the third denomination between 22 and 28 cents, he said.

ATTEMPT MADE TO SET ASIDE 30 DAY JAIL TERM

(By The Associated Press)

LANSING, Mich., July 16.—A second attempt to have set aside the thirty day jail sentence imposed upon him for contempt of court was made today in the state Supreme Court by Walter M. Nelson, Detroit attorney, who was sentenced some time ago, following charges that he withheld information before the grand jury, investigating affairs of the House of David at St. Joseph.

Nelson, released by a Supreme Court order a short time after his imprisonment, failed with the higher court in a petition seeking to have the sentence annulled. In the petition, he charged Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and other officials with having adopted a "hands off" policy with respect to the colony. The court ordered Nelson to withdraw the petition but permitted him to file a second one today "confined to pertinent facts."

In his second petition the attorney charged errors in finding him guilty and alleges the grand jury had no authority to find him guilty of contempt.

LEPER ESCAPES CONFINEMENT TO VISIT CAPITOL

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 16.—John R. Early, whose detention as a leper caused a country-wide sensation some years ago, has escaped from confinement for the fourth time and has paid a visit to his old haunts around Washington.

Having completed his call here, he today reported to the District of Columbia health authorities, who ordered him sent back to the National leprosium in Louisiana. He said he had been living at a downtown hotel. He left the leprosium three weeks ago he told the authorities, and since then also had visited Chattanooga Tennessee, Asheville and Tryon, North Carolina, Chicago and Milwaukee.

STATE RETAIL JEWELERS MEET

(By The Associated Press)

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., July 16—The banquet tonight at a local hotel wound up today's activities of the State Retail Jewelers Association in convention here after enjoying a trip to Langley field where Colonel Chas. H. Danforth, commandant, gave them a demonstration in flying the various types of machines. They were also shown points of interest about the big flying field.

Tomorrow morning the business session will be held at which time the officers who will serve for the ensuing year will be elected. A. E. Smith, of the Pinkerton Detective Agency and of the Jewelry Security Alliance, will deliver the principal address tomorrow on "Burglars vs. Jewelers." E. G. Quigley, assistant to the president of the national organization delivered an address today on the "importance of co-operation owing to pre-war conditions of jewelry trade." State president Frank R. ORGANIZE S. C. BANK IN OFFICE

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 16—Issuance of a charter to the Columbia National Bank, Columbia, S. C., announced by the Treasury today, was declared by officials to signal the completion of an unusual incident in financial organization and at the same time to mark an upward step in the banking situation of the State.

The new institution capitalized at $500,000 was organized principally in the office of Comptroller Dawes at a conference with prominent South Carolinians, who on the spot deposited their personal checks for the required capital.

The Columbia National will succeed to the Palmetto National which has been in business for many years in the State capital. Edwin W. Robertson, head of the board, came to Washington from Maine where he is on vacation and returned there at the end of the conference.

What Do People Mean by the 'Four Hundred'? It Really Should Be Called the '60,000'!

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. (Harris & Ewing) Mrs. [illegible] [Aiman Photo.] J. P. Morgan. (Copyright: U. & U.) Mrs. William K. Dick. (Central News Photo) Viscount Astor. [Wide World Photo.] Lady Nancy Astor. (Bachrach Photo.)

What do people mean when they refer to the "Four Hundred?"

It is a term used constantly and everybody knows, of course, that "society people" in general are meant.

But originally there was a real "Four Hundred." Debutante tells about it for this newspaper today.

BY DEBUTANTE.

NEW YORK.—Who are the "Four Hundred"? The term appears constantly when reference to [illegible] society is made. It is a term that has become a household word.

The term "Four Hundred" originated with the late Ward McAllister. McAllister really taught the narrow, conservative "society" of his day how to live. That is, he taught the wealthy ones of his time how to spend money—that being regarded by most people as the fundamental requisite for happiness.

Days of Simplicity

Until McAllister's heyday, in the 1850s, society had been a matter of simple friendship springing from the proximity of [illegible].

Social calls, rides in a [illegible] "tallyho" and simple [illegible] the young women wore [illegible] dresses had been the speed of the day.

There Were no Fast Sets.

I dare say [illegible] considered the height of [illegible] woman to wear jewels [illegible] day [illegible] gossip [illegible] as is now done at Newport and Southampton.

Even at Newport, prior to the [illegible] McAllister [illegible] picnics were the wildest form of entertainment in which the [illegible] indulged.

Mr. McAllister glorified the picnic. He introduced picnics at which the guests came in fancy costume. He started beach festivals which were called picnics.

The affluent ones of his day who owned yachts began to hold yacht picnics. Finally the picnic turned into the fête champetre, by which exalted term any kind of dining out of doors is now called.

Enter the Real "400."

Since Mr. McAllister had undertaken the pleasant task of organizing society it was necessary to explain just what society was. He declared New York society consisted of just 4[illegible] persons.

Whether one was in or out of the "Four Hundred" was easily apparent.

Although McAllister had great respect for family and never meant to discourage blue blood as a basis for a social classification, the venue for [illegible]

Consequently the way was opened [illegible] "Four Hundred" [illegible] the Van [illegible]

Our "New" Families

[illegible]

None of these families was socially prominent as recently as in civil war days, with the exception of the Astors. Even the Astors cannot boast a social record dating from revolutionary days. The first John Jacob came to America after the revolution as a piano merchant. He was born in Waldorf, Germany. Various descendants, including the present Viscount Astor, husband of Lady Nancy Astor, have borne the name of this little town in their own cognomens.

Almost Imperial Splendor.

Under Mrs. William Astor, mother of the late John Jacob Astor, who married Madeleine Force, now Mrs. William K. Dick, New York's "Four Hundred" rose to heights of almost imperial splendor.

Entertainments costing as much as $100,000 became the rage at Newport. Even today, after a crop of war millionaires, no one thinks of spending the amounts of money that were squandered brilliantly in the days of Mrs. Astor's supremacy.

The most spectacular private entertainment of the last year or two was the ball given last summer by Mr. and Mrs. John Aspegren at Newport. The party was said to have cost about $2,000—and Newport is still talking about it.

"400" Becomes "60,000"

But among several hundred who attended the Aspegren dance there were many who never would have had a [illegible] had Ward McAllister's "Four Hundred" classification obtained.

Unfortunately or perhaps fortunately—depending on your point of view—society has been invaded by thousands of people with scarcely a [illegible] Hundred has advanced by [illegible] "society" which may include ten times four hundred persons.
